Executive Summary

Introduction

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (the Dodd-Frank Act) created the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB). In the Act, the CFPB was directed to propose rules and disclosures that combine certain disclosures under the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) and sections 4 and 5 of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA).¹ In January 2011, the CFPB began the Mortgage Disclosure Project to integrate the TILA and RESPA disclosures using a User-Centered Design Process with two phases: a Qualitative Study and a Quantitative Study.

For the Qualitative Study, the CFPB team conducted ten rounds of consumer testing to develop and test the integrated disclosures—a Loan Estimate and a Closing Disclosure.² The Loan Estimate was developed and tested with consumers in five rounds of testing, the Closing Disclosure in two rounds of testing, and the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure together in three rounds of testing. Through the qualitative testing, the CFPB obtained data showing that consumers could comprehend the proposed disclosures and explain a rationale for their choices. The data indicated that consumers could compare the information on two disclosures, choose a loan, and use the disclosures to compare initial and final loan terms and costs. In its Proposed Rule on July 9, 2012, the CFPB proposed the Loan Estimate, an integrated disclosure that would be provided after consumers apply for a mortgage loan, and the Closing Disclosure, an integrated disclosure that would be provided before the loan closing.³ The intent was that the Loan Estimate would replace the initial TILA disclosure and the Good Faith Estimate (GFE) provided at application and that the Closing Disclosure would replace the final TILA disclosure and the uniform settlement statement (the HUD-1).

After issuing the proposal, the CFPB began the Quantitative Study, which it planned to complete before issuing the Final Rule. The Quantitative Study focused on validating the effectiveness of the CFPB's integrated disclosures and evaluating their performance compared to the current disclosures.

During this same period, the CFPB received public comments on most aspects of the proposal until November 6, 2012.⁴ The CFPB team analyzed these comments for, among other things, suggested changes to the proposed disclosures. Based on these comments, the team made several minor changes to the proposed disclosures to increase consistency within and between the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure.⁵ The public comment period also produced three development suggestions for the disclosures: (1) a Spanish translation of the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure; (2) a Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure adapted for refinance transactions; and (3) concerns about Closing Costs in all transactions. Before issuing the final rule, the CFPB evaluated versions of the integrated disclosures that addressed these comments in additional qualitative testing, which is described in a separate report.⁶

This report presents the quantitative testing results of the current and proposed disclosures and the conclusions made based on those results. It also presents the final Loan Estimate and the final Closing Disclosure designs.

The Quantitative Study

The Quantitative Study was conducted to validate the designs and performance of the integrated disclosures from the Qualitative Study and to compare the performance of the current disclosures and the CFPB's proposed integrated disclosures. The study used a controlled experiment to assess consumers' understanding and use of the current mortgage disclosures versus the proposed mortgage disclosures. It involved a $2 \times 2 \times 2 \times 2$ between-subjects factorial design that included the following factors:

1. Disclosure Type: current versus proposed;
2. Loan Type: fixed rate versus adjustable rate;
3. Difficulty: easier versus more challenging loans; and
4. Consumer: inexperienced versus experienced.

Methodology

The study used in-person, proctored, small group sessions with 858 respondents divided into two groups—experienced respondents (424) and inexperienced respondents (434)—in 20 locations across the Census Bureau regions and sub-regions in the continental United States. To be eligible for the study, respondents needed to meet the following criteria:

- 4 The Proposed Rule provided for a bifurcated comment process. Comments regarding the proposed amendments to 12 CFR 1026.1(c) were required to be received on or before September 7, 2012. For all other proposed amendments and comments pursuant to the Paperwork Reduction Act, comments were required to be received on or before November 6, 2012.
 - 5 We used these revised disclosures in the Quantitative Study, but because the modifications were relatively minor and for ease of reference, we refer to them as the Proposed Disclosures throughout this report.
 - 6 See Kleimann Communication Group. November 20, 2013. Post-Proposal Consumer Testing of Spanish and Refinance TILA-RESPA Disclosures. Available at www.consumerfinance.gov/knowbeforeyouowe.

- be 18 years or older;
- live in a household within 50 miles of the Designated Market Area (DMA) used for the interview;
- have purchased or refinanced a house in the last five years or have never purchased or have not purchased or refinanced a house in the last five years and have the intent to buy or refinance in the next two years; and
- agree to participate in the in-person session.

Respondents received initial and final disclosures with scenarios for the application and closing phases of the loan process. They only used either the current or proposed disclosures because this was a between-subjects design. All respondents received full-size disclosures, including a HUD-1 on legal-sized paper if they were in the current disclosures group. The disclosures were either fixed rate or adjustable rate loan sets and varied from easier to more challenging loans. More challenging loans contained negative amortization, interest only, or other such features. For all disclosures, the loan features changed from the initial disclosures to the final disclosures.

After completing a consent form and receiving a Privacy Act statement, each respondent completed a questionnaire with 48 questions during a 60-minute testing session. Respondents had to answer questions about both the initial and final disclosures. The questionnaire consisted of five parts:

- Part 1. Respondents reviewed two initial disclosures, selected which one they would choose, and provided a rationale for why they chose it (Task 1);
- Part 2. Respondents compared the terms of the two initial disclosures (Task 2);
- Part 3. Respondents answered questions about one of the two disclosures (Task 3);
- Part 4. Respondents compared one of the initial disclosures with a matching final disclosure (Task 4) and answered questions about the final disclosure (Task 5); and
- Part 5. Respondents rated the initial and final disclosures on three scales for ease of reading, ease of comparison, and ease of finding information.

The CFPB team developed the questionnaire using nine key topic areas identified by researchers and consumer advocates as critical for informed consumers. The topics included amortization, annual percentage rate (APR), closing costs/settlement charges, escrow account, interest rate, loan amount, monthly payments, mortgage insurance, and risk factors. The ninth topic—risk factors—included questions from the other 8 concept areas that relate to potential risks consumers would weigh in selecting a loan. These key topic areas are addressed by both the current and proposed disclosures.

The Analysis

Of the 48 questions included in the study, the heart of the analysis focused on responses to 39 key questions (Question 3 through Question 41) in Parts 2, 3, and 4 for both the current and proposed disclosures. Responses were scored as having been answered correctly or incorrectly based on the answer keys developed by the CFPB team. For each question, respondents were assigned a score of “1” if they answered the question correctly or if they were required to skip the question because of a correct answer to a prior question. Respondents were assigned a score of “0” if they failed to answer the question correctly or if they were required to skip the question based on an incorrect answer to a prior question. Multiple correct answers were possible for a few questions (for example, Question 17). For these, respondents could receive partial credit (for example, a score of ½).

The analysis centered primarily on the accuracy scores assigned to respondents for these 39 key questions.

1. We looked at accuracy of responses with current versus proposed disclosures based on aggregate measures calculated across all the questions in Parts 2, 3, and 4. This analysis is similar to the analysis reported by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) in its mortgage disclosure study in 2007.⁷
2. We looked at several sub-aggregate analyses that focused on questions grouped by the tasks performed by respondents and by the 9 specific content areas covered by the questions (for example, amortization, interest rate, and so on).
3. We examined the more detailed data by individual questions and whether the results varied by respondent experience levels, loan complexity, and loan type. The statistical comparisons in these analyses are reported on a question-by-question basis and are akin to those reported by the FTC in their 2007 report.⁸
4. For statistical testing, we compared points at the 95% confidence level using a two-tailed t-test. Most of the comparisons are based on subgroups of approximately 430 respondents. The Margin of Error (MOE) for these comparisons for responses around 50% at the 95% confidence level is +/- 4.7 percentage points.

The Results

Aggregate Accuracy Results

Two aggregate indices designed to capture the overall accuracy of responses were created from scores assigned to the 39 individual questions. Both indices were intended to capture the percentage of correct responses that a respondent gave to the questions. However, they differed on how responses to questions that could be skipped were treated. One index was based on scores assigned to all 39 questions, while a second index was based only on the 29 “non-skippable” questions that all respondents were required to answer.

In the results for the first index, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 59.3% of all 39 questions correctly. The corresponding percentage for respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures is 76.2% of all 39 questions answered correctly. The difference (16.9 percentage points) was statistically significant⁹ and persisted when we looked at it separately within subgroups. Results for the second index showed a virtually identical pattern. Although the difference in performance for respondents with the proposed disclosures compared to the current disclosures was marginally smaller for the second index, it was statistically significant in favor of the proposed disclosures (14.8 percentage points).

In sum, both aggregate indices showed a statistically significant performance advantage of approximately 16 percentage points for the proposed disclosures. Furthermore, this advantage was quite similar in magnitude for experienced as well as inexperienced respondents, easier as well as more challenging loans, and fixed rate as well as adjustable rate loans (range 13.8 to 17.8 percentage point advantage).

Results Grouped by Part and Task

In Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the questionnaire, the complete set of 39 questions (as well as the subset of 29 non-skippable questions) were divided into four groups corresponding to the four distinct tasks performed by respondents during these parts of the study.¹⁰ In this section, we compare the performance of the current and proposed disclosures separately for questions focused on each of these tasks.

For Task 2, comparison of two initial disclosures, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 57.3% of the 8 questions correctly. Respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 81.4% of the questions correctly (difference = 24.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 6 non-skippable measures were similar (63.8% for current disclosures, 83.3% for proposed disclosures, difference = 19.5 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

For Task 3, comprehension of a single initial disclosure, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 70.0% of the 16 questions correctly. Respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 80.5% of the questions correctly (difference = 10.5 percentage points). The comparable results for the 14 non-skippable questions were somewhat weaker but still in favor of the proposed disclosures (74.0% for current disclosures, 80.9% for proposed disclosures, difference = 6.9 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

For Task 4, comparison of one initial and one final disclosure, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 54.9% of the 8 questions correctly. Respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 69.0% of the 8 questions correctly (difference = 14.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 4 non-skippable questions were somewhat stronger in favor of the proposed disclosures (61.6% for current disclosures, 79.0% for proposed disclosures, difference = 17.4 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

For Task 5, comprehension of a final disclosure, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 42.1% of the 7 questions correctly. Respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 68.5% of the 7 questions correctly (difference = 26.4 percentage points). The comparable results for the 5 non-skippable questions were somewhat stronger in favor of the proposed disclosures (40.7% for current disclosures, 69.8% for proposed disclosures, difference = 29.1 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

In sum, the data showed that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of the four tasks performed by respondents in the study. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures varied from 26.4 percentage points (for comprehension of final disclosures) to 10.5 percentage points (for comprehension of initial disclosures).

Results Grouped by Concept

In Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the study, the complete set of 39 questions (as well as the subset of 29 non-skippable questions) was divided into 8 groups corresponding to 8 distinct loan-related concepts or terms. These concept areas included amortization, annual percentage rate (APR), closing costs/settlement charges, escrow account, interest rate, loan amount, monthly payments, and mortgage insurance. A ninth area — risk factor — included questions from the other 8 concept areas.

Amortization (3 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 68.5% of these questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 76.1% of the questions correctly (difference = 7.6 percentage points). This difference was statistically significant.

APR (2 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 74.4% of the 2 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 83.6% of the 2 questions correctly (difference = 9.2 percentage points). This difference was statistically significant.

Closing Costs/Settlement Charges (7 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 66.5% of the 7 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 72.9% of the 7 questions correctly (difference = 6.4 percentage points). The comparable results for the 6 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (69.8% for current disclosures, 77.1% for proposed disclosures, difference = 7.3 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Escrow Account (4 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 63.4% of the 4 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 71.5% of the 4 questions correctly (difference = 8.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 3 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (66.6% for current disclosures, 75.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 8.8 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Interest Rate (6 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 81.9% of the 6 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 86.6% of the 6 questions correctly (difference = 4.7 percentage points). The comparable results for the 4 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (87.0% for current disclosures, 91.2% for proposed disclosures, difference = 4.2 percentage points).

Both differences were statistically significant.

Loan Amount (6 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 44.4% of the 6 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 79.6% of the 6 questions correctly (difference = 35.2 percentage points). For the 5 non-skippable questions, the comparable results were somewhat better for both disclosures (47.4% for current disclosures, 83.0% for proposed disclosures, difference = 35.6 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Monthly Payments (9 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 46.1% of the 9 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 70.9% of the 9 questions correctly (difference = 24.8 percentage points). The comparable results for the 5 non-skippable questions were similar, although the difference was smaller (49.7% for current disclosures, 71.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 21.7 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Mortgage Insurance (2 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 32.7% of the 2 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 71.1% of the 2 questions correctly (difference = 38.4 percentage points). However, this large difference was due entirely to one of the two questions that was skippable (Q26). The difference was statistically significant.

Risk Factors (8 questions). On average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 64.6% of the 8 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 76.0% of the 8 questions correctly (difference = 11.6 percentage points). The comparable results for the 7 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (68.4% for current disclosures, 76.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 8.0 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

In sum, the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of the nine loan concept areas, including risk factors. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures ranged from 35.2 (for loan amount) to 4.7 percentage points difference (for interest rate).

Results across Experience, Loan Type, and Loan Complexity

While there were some variations in results across respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type for particular questions, the data were fairly similar, especially for Tasks 2, 3, and 5. For example, when we examined the average data for the 8 questions in Task 2 (comparison of initial disclosures), the difference between accuracy levels for the proposed versus current disclosures were in a fairly narrow range of 15.1 to 33.0 percentage points. This was true when compared across respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type levels. However, the variation was somewhat larger for Task 4 (comparison of initial and final disclosures) with a range of 4.7 to 23.4 percentage points, suggesting larger differences in accuracy of responses to these questions within subgroups. Nonetheless, all differences were statistically significant.

Results for Task 1

The open-ended question (Question 2) in Part 1, Task 1 asked respondents to provide reasons for their choice of loan in Part 1 of the study. We focused on the total number of reasons and comments provided by respondents as a function of the initial disclosure (current versus proposed) they examined. Although not the central focus of our analyses, these data can shed light on the degree to which the current and proposed disclosures differentially influenced the ability of respondents to develop and articulate reasons justifying or explaining their selection.

Out of the 858 study respondents, 852 provided at least one reason or comment while 4 respondents said “don’t know” and 2 respondents did not say anything. Respondents provided various comments and arguments, including comments about loan terms, costs, and risk factors, comments about the disclosures themselves, and comments related to personal experiences. Overall, respondents exposed to the current disclosures made an average of 2.68 comments. The corresponding average for respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures was 3.09 comments. The difference (0.41) was statistically significant. Furthermore, the difference persisted when we looked at it separately within subgroups. These results suggested that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures could articulate and explain more reasoning behind their choice. This was the case regardless of their experience, difficulty of the loan, and whether the loan was a fixed rate or adjustable rate loan.

Conclusions

The results of the study lead to five conclusions, all in favor of the proposed disclosures:

1. The proposed disclosures performed better on aggregate measures.
2. The proposed disclosures, on average, performed better for Tasks 2-5.
3. The proposed disclosures, on average, performed better for all concept areas.
4. The proposed disclosures performed better regardless of respondent experience, loan type, or loan complexity.
5. Respondents using the proposed disclosures listed more comments while explaining their choice in Task 1.

Limitations

Two features of the Quantitative Study limit the generalizability of the results. First, the sampling was done in each of the 20 DMAs to be as representative of each DMA as possible, with the only real limitation being rural respondents.¹¹ Second, the study was a controlled experiment conducted in a supervised, distraction-free environment. In addition, although respondents generally had enough time to complete the various tasks at their own pace, time limits were imposed on each part of the study to keep the total session length to approximately 60 minutes. The extent to which these results will replicate in noisy, distracting, real-world settings with no externally imposed time limits is unclear. This is an interesting conjecture worthy of assessment in future research.

Importance of Consumer Testing

The Mortgage Disclosure Project shows the advantages and benefits of two types of consumer testing: Qualitative Testing and Quantitative Testing.

Qualitative Testing

The Qualitative Study ensured that consumers could comprehend the basic facts about a loan, could compare two initial loan disclosures, and could state their reasons for making that choice. The study also allowed the CFPB to design the proposed disclosures on an iterative basis, using the qualitative testing results of one round to refine the designs of the integrated disclosures for the next round. Further, it allowed the development of the Closing Disclosure with the Loan Estimate to enable better comparison between the initial and final disclosures. In addition, the inclusion of industry representatives in the qualitative testing allowed the CFPB to ensure that industry personnel could understand the disclosures and explain them to consumers. The CFPB understands that consumers do not obtain or close loans in isolation and often discuss the disclosures with loan officers and settlement agents. As a supplement to the Qualitative Study, the public posting of the design iterations on its Know Before You Owe website further allowed the CFPB to anticipate concerns these stakeholders might have.

Quantitative Testing

The Quantitative Study looked at both the current and the proposed disclosures used at application and at closing. Thus, the study allowed the CFPB to compare the performance of the proposed disclosure to the current disclosure to ensure that the proposed disclosure showed significant improved performance. The CFPB wanted to ensure that it was not merely changing the disclosures, but improving and streamlining the mortgage disclosures for consumers.

The Quantitative Study confirmed that the proposed disclosures indeed performed better and we can extrapolate that the disclosures then provided benefits in ease of use and understanding for consumers. Importantly, the differences between the current and proposed disclosures were statistically significant whether considering all respondents, experienced versus inexperienced respondents, easier versus more challenging loans, or fixed versus adjustable rate loans.

The results also provided an added advantage to the CFPB by allowing it to identify areas in which the proposed disclosures did not perform well before issuing the Final Rule. For only 4 questions did the current disclosures perform better and only one of those was statistically significant—

Question 16—about the closing costs.¹² Based on these results, the CFPB examined the answers to Question 16, identified why respondents answered incorrectly, further improved the disclosure, and tested the change with consumers in an additional round of qualitative testing before issuing the Final Rule. Thus, the results of the quantitative testing helped to ensure even better performance on the disclosures before issuing the Final Rule.¹³

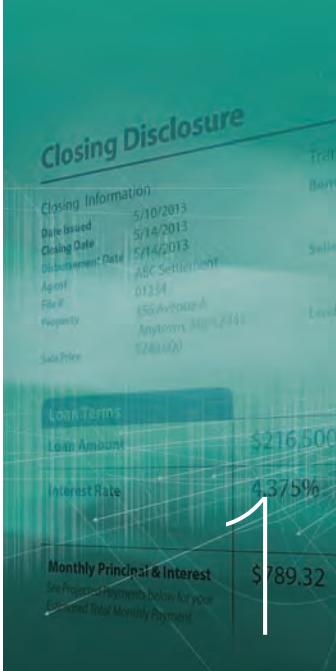

The CFPB has placed great importance on consumer testing in its design of the integrated disclosures mandated by the Dodd-Frank Act. The thoroughness of the qualitative testing ensured that the disclosures resulted in improved consumer comprehension, comparison, and more knowledgeable choices. The quantitative testing documents the benefits of the new disclosures. As the study by Lacko and Pappalardo also advocated:

The development of effective consumer disclosures requires careful analysis of what information consumers really need, how consumers will interpret and use the information, how to convey the information in a way that can be easily understood and used by consumers, and, combining all of this, careful analysis of the benefits and costs of the disclosures. Consumer testing is a critical part of this analysis.¹⁴

¹² Question 16 asked respondents with the current disclosures to identify the settlement charges and asked respondents working with the proposed disclosures to identify the closing costs, based on the language used on each disclosure. The design of the current GFE places the heading Summary of your settlement charges in a prominent position to emphasize it. However, the design of the proposed Loan Estimate places the phrase Cash to Close in a prominent position to emphasize it; the closing costs are present, but are embedded in text, not in a heading. The CFPB team expected some difference in performance, but not at the level that occurred. In fact, 51.6% of respondents with the proposed disclosures provided the cash to close amount and 46.3% provided the closing cost amount. Only 2.1% of respondents provided an answer other than these two.

Introduction

On July 21, 2010, the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (the Dodd-Frank Act) was enacted, which created the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB).¹ As part of its broad mandate, the CFPB assumed certain responsibilities for the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA). The Dodd-Frank Act directed the CFPB to publish a rule that combines certain disclosures under TILA and sections 4 and 5 of RESPA into a single, integrated disclosure for mortgage loan transactions covered by those laws.²

TILA was enacted in 1968 with the purpose of assuring a meaningful disclosure of credit terms to promote the informed use of credit by consumers, mainly through clear and conspicuous disclosures of the cost of credit and other core loan terms. TILA requires a consumer to receive a disclosure of the credit terms within three days of a consumer's application for a mortgage loan (the initial TILA disclosure). Redisclosure is required three days before closing if certain terms have changed (the final TILA disclosure). The CFPB implements TILA under Regulation Z.

RESPA was enacted in 1974 to provide more effective advance disclosure to borrowers and sellers of their settlement charges. RESPA requires a consumer to receive a Good Faith Estimate of the closing costs (the Good Faith Estimate or GFE) within three days of a consumer's application for a mortgage loan. RESPA also requires a consumer to receive a uniform settlement statement (the HUD-1) at closing, listing all the costs of the loan transaction and any accompanying home transaction. The CFPB implements RESPA under Regulation X.

On July 9, 2012, as directed by the Dodd-Frank Act, the CFPB issued a Proposed Rule and proposed disclosures (the Proposed Rule).³ The Proposed Rule proposed to combine the disclosures required under TILA and sections 4 and 5 of RESPA for mortgage loan transactions covered by those laws. The CFPB proposed an integrated disclosure that would be provided after consumers apply for a mortgage loan (the Loan Estimate) and an integrated disclosure that would be provided before the loan closing (the Closing Disclosure). The Loan Estimate is intended to replace the initial TILA disclosure and the GFE provided at application. The Closing Disclosure is intended to replace the final TILA disclosure and the HUD-1.

The Mortgage Disclosure Project

In January 2011, the CFPB began the Mortgage Disclosure Project to integrate the TILA and RESPA disclosures. The CFPB used a User-Centered Design Process with two phases: a Qualitative Study and a Quantitative Study. See Figure 1. User-Centered Design Process.⁴ After the Proposed Rule in July 2012, the CFPB received comments on the integrated disclosures and, based on these comments, made additional consistency changes to the disclosures before the Quantitative Study.⁵

⁴ The Qualitative Study included the Context Setting, Formative Development, and Iterative Usability Testing stages. The Quantitative Study included the Validation Testing stage.

⁵ We used these revised disclosures in the Quantitative Study, but because the modifications were relatively minor and for ease of reference, we refer to them as the Proposed Disclosures throughout this report.

The Qualitative Testing

The Qualitative Study focused on three parts of the User-Centered Design Process: understanding the context setting for industry and consumers, formatively developing the disclosures, and iteratively testing the disclosures with consumers and industry participants.⁶ For this phase of the Mortgage Disclosure Project, the CFPB team used extensive consumer testing to develop and test the disclosures. The Loan Estimate was developed and tested with consumers in five rounds of testing; the Closing Disclosure in two rounds of consumer testing; and a final three rounds of testing ensured that consumers could use the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure together.

Through the 10 rounds of qualitative testing, the CFPB received extensive evidence that consumers could comprehend the proposed disclosures, compare the information on two disclosures, choose a loan and explain a rationale for their choice, and use the disclosures to compare initial and final loan terms and costs. These proposed disclosures were included in the Proposed Rule that the CFPB issued on July 9, 2012.

Public Comments on the Proposed Disclosures

Public comments on most of the Proposed Rule were accepted until November 6, 2012.⁷ The CFPB analyzed these comments for, among other things, suggested changes to the two proposed disclosures. Many of the disclosure-related comments suggested minor modifications to the disclosures to ensure greater consistency within and between the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure. See Table 1. Consistency Changes Made for the Quantitative Testing Based on Public Comments on the next page. For example, one comment about the Loan Estimate suggested adding the word Estimated to the term Total Monthly Payment, as used in the Loan Terms table, so it matched the “Estimated Total Monthly Payment” term used in Projected Payments. The CFPB incorporated these minor design changes into the proposed disclosures to improve consistency within and between the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure before the Quantitative Study began.

⁷ The Proposed Rule provided for a bifurcated comment process. Comments regarding the proposed amendments to 12 CFR 1026.1(c) were required to be received on or before September 7, 2012. For all other proposed amendments and comments pursuant to the Paperwork Reduction Act, comments were required to be received on or before November 6, 2012.

The public comment period produced three significant development suggestions for both the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure: (1) a Spanish translation of the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure; (2) a modified Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure for refinance transactions; and 3) a concern about Closing Costs. The CFPB evaluated versions of the integrated disclosures that addressed these comments in additional qualitative testing, as described below.⁸

Spanish Translations

In the first two rounds of testing for the Mortgage Disclosure Project, prior to issuing the Proposed Rule, the CFPB had translated the early prototypes of the Loan Estimate into Spanish and tested the translations with Spanish-speaking participants. The CFPB had intended to co-develop Spanish language versions of the integrated disclosures to ensure the design aided consumer understanding in both English and Spanish. The testing results showed that issues with the Loan Estimate were mostly related to translation and not to differences in how the information was presented. As a result, as discussed in the Proposed Rule, the CFPB delayed testing of the translated disclosures until after the designs of both the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure were fully developed. After issuing the Proposed Rule, the proposed disclosures were translated and then tested with consumers in four rounds of testing in Arlington, VA; Phoenix, AZ; Miami, FL; and Baltimore, MD from October 2012 through July 2013.

Refinance Transaction

Although the Proposed Rule included specific versions of a Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure for a refinance transaction, the CFPB received public comments suggesting that the proposed disclosures could be confusing to consumers for such transactions. Accordingly, the CFPB evaluated potential modifications to them and conducted additional testing of these modified versions of the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure for refinance transactions. In addition, Spanish testing in Baltimore, MD was conducted using these modified refinance versions of the integrated disclosures to ensure the performance of the Spanish translations on the refinance-specific disclosures. This testing was completed in June and July 2013 in Bethesda, MD; Baltimore, MD; and Richmond, VA.

Closing Costs

Based on the public comments about the Closing Disclosure generally and results from the Quantitative Study, the CFPB team also tested a modification to the Loan Estimate and Closing Disclosure that would apply to all transactions. This testing occurred in Baltimore, MD and Richmond, VA.

The Quantitative Study

As part of the Mortgage Disclosure Project, the Quantitative Study focused on validating the effectiveness of the proposed disclosures and their performance compared to the current disclosures. To validate the performance of the proposed disclosures from qualitative testing, and to compare the performance of the proposed and current disclosures, the CFPB conducted a baseline comparison of the proposed disclosures with the current disclosures. The Quantitative Study began in October 2012 with the development of the experimental design, the quantitative questionnaire, and the disclosures used for testing.⁹ The Quantitative Study was fielded from May 2013 through June 2013 at 20 sites throughout the continental United States.

The key previous study, conducted by staff at the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), Improving Consumer Mortgage Disclosures,¹⁰ used prototype disclosure designs and compared their performance with the initial TILA disclosure and the GFE that were in use before 2010. That study, however, focused solely on the disclosures that consumers receive after applying for a mortgage. The CFPB designed its Quantitative Study to provide a similar baseline comparison against the current initial disclosures. However, in contrast to the FTC study, it also compared the disclosures provided at closing, that is, a baseline comparison of the performance of the final TILA disclosure and the HUD-1 versus the proposed Closing Disclosure. Further, the CFPB's Quantitative Study included a baseline comparison of performance when respondents compared initial and final disclosures.

The loans used in testing included fixed rate and adjustable rate loans, which were further subdivided into easier and more challenging loans. The more challenging loans included negative amortization and interest only loan features, as well as prepayment penalties. In addition, when the respondents compared the application disclosures to the closing disclosures, the more challenging loans had more differences.

A Comparison of the Current and Proposed Disclosures

In this chapter, we have provided samples of the initial and final disclosures used in the Quantitative Study. The Quantitative Study used names of fictitious banks to enhance the ability of respondents to engage in the scenario. Both the current and the proposed initial disclosures shown are for the fictitious Aspen Bank. Both the current and proposed final disclosures shown are for a more challenging loan from the fictitious Fir Bank. Appendices J – Q include copies of the current disclosures used in the Quantitative Study. Appendices R – Y include copies of the proposed disclosures used in the Quantitative Study.

Current Initial Disclosure

Currently under TILA and Regulation Z, consumers who apply for a loan receive an initial TILA disclosure, which was originally issued by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (FRB).¹¹

- Basic transaction information, such as the lender's name and borrowers' names.
- Key Truth-In-Lending information, such as Annual Percentage Rate (APR), Finance Charge, Amount Financed, and Total of Payments.
- Interest Rate and Payment Summary table that discloses the Estimated

¹¹ While the FRB originally published the regulations and model forms for this disclosure and the final TILA disclosure, and HUD originally published the regulations and standard forms for the GFE and the HUD-1, as noted below, the CFPB generally assumed rule writing responsibilities for these disclosures and the TILA and RESPA on July 21, 2011, pursuant to the Dodd-Frank Act.

Monthly Payment.

- Listing of loan details, such as Demand Feature, Variable Rate Feature, Required Deposit, Security Interest, Filing/Recording Fees, Late Charge, and Assumption.
- Two statements that state that the borrower can request an itemization of the Amount Financed and a statement that “There is no guarantee that you will be able to refinance to lower your rate and payments.”

- Property Insurance sections that state the options regarding from whom the borrower can get insurance.
- Insurance section that states insurance is not required to get credit and has the borrower sign if he wants Credit Life, Credit Disability, or Credit Life and Disability insurance.
- Prepayment section that states if the loan has a prepayment penalty and if the borrower may get a refund on part of the finance charge.

Current Final Disclosure

Currently under TILA and Regulation Z, consumers who close on a loan receive a typically two-page final TILA disclosure which was originally issued by the Federal Reserve Board (FRB).

The final TILA disclosure covers the same information that is in the initial TILA disclosure but contains final information. In addition, the content can change if the loan is an adjustable rate mortgage loan or has interest only or negative amortization features. The final TILA disclosure includes the following:

- Basic transaction information, such as the lender's name and borrowers' names.
- Key Truth-In-Lending information, such as Annual Percentage Rate (APR), Finance Charge, Amount Financed, and Total of Payments.
- Interest Rate and Payment Summary table that discloses the Estimated Monthly Payment.
- Listing of loan details, such as Demand Feature, Variable Rate Feature, Required Deposit, Security Interest, Filing/Recording Fees, Late Charge, and Assumption.
- Two statements that state that the consumer can request an itemization of the Amount Financed and a statement that There is no guarantee that you will be able to refinance to lower your rate and payments.

Methodology

The Quantitative Study used a controlled experiment to examine the extent to which respondents could understand and use the current mortgage disclosures versus the CFPB's proposed mortgage disclosures. The study included both current and proposed initial disclosures—initial TILA disclosure and GFE versus the Loan Estimate. It also included both the current and proposed final disclosures—final TILA disclosure and HUD-1 versus the Closing Disclosure. The Quantitative Study involved a $2 \times 2 \times 2 \times 2$ between-subjects factorial design.¹² The factors were:

1. Disclosure Type: current versus proposed (initial and final disclosures)
2. Loan Type: fixed rate versus adjustable rate
3. Difficulty: easier versus more challenging loans
4. Consumer: inexperienced versus experienced

During May and June 2013, the study used in-person, proctored, small group sessions with 858 consumers divided into two groups—experienced respondents (424) and inexperienced respondents (434)—in 20 locations across the Census Bureau regions and sub-regions in the continental United States. The CFPB team chose the 20 locations to include geographic diversity to reach populations in both large and small Designated Market Areas (DMAs) and to be able to reach into rural markets. Respondents answered questions only about either current or proposed disclosures and used both the initial and final disclosures. For each set of disclosures, respondents received either fixed rate or adjustable rate loan sets. Within both sets, the loans included various loan features from easier to more challenging fixed rate or adjustable rate loans. The more challenging features included complicated loan features, such as negative amortization, interest only, and other such features. In addition, the loan features changed from the initial disclosures to the final disclosures. Some of these changes were fairly simple and obvious, while others involved more challenging and subtle changes. Each test group at each site was mixed by the factors, that is, by the disclosure type, the loan types and characteristics, the difficulty of the loans, and consumer experience.

The Current and Proposed Disclosures

For the Quantitative Study, about half of the respondents (428) used the current initial disclosures (initial TILA disclosure and GFE) and the current final disclosures (final TILA disclosure and the HUD-1).¹³ The remaining respondents (430) used the proposed initial disclosure (the Loan Estimate) and proposed final disclosure (the Closing Disclosure). All respondents received full-size disclosures, including the HUD-1 on legal-sized paper. For this chapter, we refer to the current and proposed disclosures in the following way:

- Current Initial Disclosure includes the initial TILA disclosure and the GFE,
- Current Final Disclosure includes the final TILA disclosure and the HUD-1,
- Proposed Initial Disclosure is the Loan Estimate, and
- Proposed Final Disclosure is the Closing Disclosure.

Primarily because of amendments to the statutory requirements made by the Dodd-Frank Act, the proposed disclosures include more information than the current disclosures. In addition, to reduce the paperwork burden for both industry and consumers, the CFPB incorporated disclosures under other statutory provisions that are currently provided as separate pages. For example, the proposed Loan Estimate includes an Appraisal notice required by the Equal Credit Opportunity Act and a Servicing disclosure required under section 6 of RESPA.

We did not alter the current disclosures used in this study to reflect the information required by the Dodd-Frank Act or the other disclosures integrated into the proposed disclosures. There are no current regulations that implement the new Dodd-Frank Act statutory disclosures, and thus, there is no “baseline” for them. In addition, lenders currently present the disclosures required under other current statutory provisions separately from the mortgage disclosures and in varied formats. As a consequence, there is no “baseline” for mortgage disclosures that include these other statutory requirements. Accordingly, the current disclosures used in this study included only the initial current TILA disclosures and final current TILA disclosures, the GFE and the HUD-1 disclosures, required by TILA and sections 4 and 5 of RESPA.¹⁴

13 The CFPB determined that for the TILA disclosures used in the study it would adhere to the regulatory text of 12 CFR 1026.18 for some elements of the disclosures, rather than the model disclosures in Appendix H of Regulation Z, which may differ in some ways from the regulatory text. Accordingly, for some of the loan products in the study, there may be differences between the TILA disclosures and the model disclosures in Appendix H of Regulation Z.

14 As implemented by current 12 CFR parts 1024 and 1026.

The CFPB intended from the start to set up this study as a comparison of the current and proposed disclosures. As noted by Lacko and Pappalardo in their key study:

Including both current and prototype disclosures in these tests greatly increases our ability to understand and evaluate the test results. Each version of the disclosure acts as a benchmark and control for testing the other. If we tested only current disclosures, we would not know, regardless of the results, whether we could continue to improve consumer understanding of the information. A seemingly poor performance by the current disclosures may be the best performance possible given the limits of consumer comprehension and a seemingly good performance might still be significantly improved. These questions can only be answered through testing possible alternatives. Similarly, if we tested only the proposed disclosures, we would not know whether it provided any improvement over the current disclosures. A seemingly mediocre performance by the proposed disclosures may still represent a substantial improvement over the current disclosures, and an excellent performance may not differ significantly from the performance of the current disclosures. The study design used here which tests both current and proposed disclosures, provides for direct comparison of the two alternatives and an informed assessment of the performance of both.¹⁵

Test Procedures

In every city, each small group of respondents met at a scheduled time at a market research field service center.¹⁶ Each session lasted approximately 60 minutes. Groups were mixed by the factors of the study: disclosure type, loan type and characteristics, difficulty of the loans, and consumer experience. The number of small groups varied across sites. See Appendix A. Final Questionnaire Name Set Distribution.

When respondents arrived, each completed a Respondent Questionnaire to confirm his or her information from the initial screening survey. Each respondent also received a Privacy Statement and Consent Form to sign and a Privacy Act Statement the respondents could keep. Both the Consent Form and Privacy Act Statement described how we would maintain the privacy of the respondent's personal identity.

A trained researcher who acted as a proctor led each 60-minute test session. Before testing, each proctor went through a two-hour briefing and practice session to ensure compliance with all instructions. In addition, the data collection leader viewed each proctor's first test session to make sure the process was followed completely. The proctor read the Proctor Instructions to the respondents and was available to answer procedural, but not content, questions. See Appendix B. Proctor Script. At the end of the session, the proctor collected all disclosures and completed questionnaires and directed respondents to the reception area to pick up their incentive payment.

Each respondent worked individually to complete the structured questionnaire for either a set of current or proposed disclosures. The disclosure type and loan type were randomized so each respondent in a particular test session had a different set of loans than the other respondents. In addition, in preparing the packages, the initial loans that respondents saw were also randomized. No respondent could “copy” from another respondent, and the proctor stated that each set of materials used by each respondent in the session was different. Administering the structured questionnaires in small groups with no individual respondent having the same set of disclosures reduced any possible bias because of the proctor—intentional or unintentional—as could occur in a one-on-one interview.

The Session Structure

The 60-minute session used 5 minutes at the beginning for an introduction and 5 minutes at the end for the logistics of collecting materials. Respondents used the remaining 50 minutes to complete the five parts of the questionnaire:

- In Part 1 (10 minutes), respondents reviewed two initial disclosures, selected which one they would choose, and provided a rationale for why they chose it.
- In Part 2 (10 minutes), respondents compared the terms of the same two initial disclosures.
- In Part 3 (15 minutes), respondents answered questions about one of the two initial disclosures.
- In Part 4 (10 minutes), respondents compared one of the initial disclosures with a matching final disclosure. They also answered questions about only the final disclosure.
- In Part 5 (5 minutes), respondents rated the initial disclosures and the final disclosures on three scales for ease of reading, ease of comparison, and ease of finding information.

For each part, the respondents received a different colored envelope that contained the relevant part of the questionnaire and the related disclosures. Each color corresponded to its own part of the questionnaire. At the end of each timed part, respondents replaced the questionnaire and disclosures they had worked with into the original envelope and set it aside. They then removed another envelope which contained the next part of the questionnaire and the related disclosures. No respondent saw the entire set of disclosures or the entire questionnaire at the beginning of the session or at any other time.

The Questionnaire

During the development of the questionnaire, the CFPB team identified nine key topic areas that researchers and consumer advocates agreed were critical for informed consumers and were addressed by both the current and proposed disclosures. The CFPB team also decided that only questions that could be answered by information on both the current and proposed disclosures would be included. For example, although the proposed initial disclosure prominently displays the “Cash to Close” amount, we did not include a question about that topic during Part 2 and Part 3 (which included only the initial disclosures), since the current initial disclosures do not include that information. See Appendix C. Questionnaire.

The nine key topics included amortization, annual percentage rate (APR), closing costs/settlement charges, escrow account, interest rate, loan amount, monthly payments, mortgage insurance, and risk factors. Risk Factors included questions from the other 8 concept areas. For this latter topic, we had no separate questions, but incorporated questions that asked about changes over time that occurred after closing to the interest rate, principal and interest payments, and the loan amount. Risk factors also included whether the loan had an escrow payment, interest only payments, a prepayment penalty, or negative amortization. See Table 2. Key Topics, Questionnaire Parts, Tasks, and Related Questions for more detail.

In general, respondents were either comparing two disclosures or looking at an individual disclosure. Thus, questions varied in their phrasing. Some questions were fill-ins in which the respondent needed to write-in a specific number. Some questions were multiple-choice. Some questions were phrased using the exact terms on the disclosures, such as annual percentage rate (APR). Some questions paraphrased the language, such as Question 22 about prepayment penalties. A few questions were open-ended in which respondents could fill in any response. Because respondents used both initial and final disclosures, the topic sometimes was addressed by juxtaposed questions, but generally the questions were scattered across Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the questionnaire.

Questionnaires for the current and proposed disclosures were identical with two exceptions:

1. Each questionnaire referred to the loan disclosures that the respondent was using by a fictitious bank name. For example, Questions 1-10 used a specific fictitious bank name even in the multiple-choice questions.
2. For the current initial and final disclosures, we used the term “settlement” as applicable, to reflect the language on the current GFE. For the proposed initial and final disclosures, we used the term “closing” as applicable, to reflect the language of the Loan Estimate.

Within the questionnaires, three sections included questions that were different from the core questions in Parts 2, 3, and 4.

- In Part 1, the initial two questions attempted to collect a broader perspective about performance. The respondents were given two initial disclosures, asked to examine them, and then selected which of the two they preferred. As described in the section about the loans below, neither loan was a “better” loan, so our analysis made no judgment about which loan was selected. However, respondents were then asked, “Why did you make that selection? Please explain your thinking in as much detail as possible in the space below.” Our goal was two-fold. First, we wanted to identify the characteristics respondents would select without any of the indirect prompting that occurs when any question is asked. An asked question inevitably marks an area of interest to the researchers. To a limited extent, respondents’ answers could give us insight into the tradeoffs made when selecting a loan. Second, we wanted to identify the number of reasons a respondent would list. Fully aware that the respondent would control the number of reasons listed because of time or interest, we believed that the number would give us a proxy measure of how easily respondents could identify key terms and synthesize them into their conscious decision-making.
- In Part 4, Question 42, we asked respondents if they had any other comments about the disclosures.
- In Part 5, the final 6 questions asked respondents to rate the initial disclosure and the final disclosure on ease of comprehending, comparing, and finding information.

About the Loans

To create the loan products for testing, we set up two parallel sets of current and proposed disclosures. See Table 3. Loan Types for more detail. Within those two sets, loans were either fixed or adjustable rate loans. Within the fixed rate and adjustable rate loans, we created sets of easier and more challenging loans—and within the easier and more challenging classification, we created two versions of the loans, A and B. Each A and B version of the loans included both initial and final disclosures.¹⁷ See Appendices J-Q for the current disclosures used in testing. See Appendices R-Y for the proposed disclosures used in testing.

Loan Characteristics

In this between-subjects design, respondents used either the current or the proposed disclosures, not both. Respondents were assigned to either fixed rate loans or to adjustable rate loans.

Once assigned, they did not receive the other type of loan. Each loan used by a respondent had the name of a fictitious bank. To some extent, we named the banks to increase the comfort of respondents as they dealt with the abstractness of numbers and the multiple factors they needed to consider as they examined the loans. To reduce the possibility of bias against the names of the lenders, each cell of the loan type was given two specific names. For example, the Current Disclosure, Fixed, Easier, A loan was named Aspen Bank or Maple Bank. The corresponding Proposed Disclosure, Fixed, Easier, A loan also used Aspen Bank or Maple Bank. As a result, for both the current and proposed disclosures, half of the respondents who received Fixed, Easier A loans received disclosures from Aspen Bank and half received disclosures from Maple Bank.

Within a type, the loans reflected easier or more challenging loan characteristics to test the effectiveness of the disclosures for different loan types and features. Easier loans were relatively straightforward in their loan terms and closing details. More challenging loans offered more complex loan terms and closing details. Even though more prevalent in years before the recent financial crisis, loan features, such as interest only payments, prepayment penalties, negative amortization, and optional payments are still possible, and some are currently available to consumers. These features present unique risks to consumers in the form of potentially increased payments, principal balances, and costs of refinancing. In addition, new product features may be developed that also contain such risks. The existence of such a risk in a loan is an important aspect of the loan for a consumer to consider in evaluating the loan. Accordingly, the more challenging loans included several loans with such features to evaluate the performance of the proposed disclosures in particular for such risks. See Table 4. Key Differences Across Initial and Final Disclosure Sets.

For the initial disclosures, neither Version A nor Version B was clearly a less expensive or "better" loan. We wanted the loans to reflect more real-life scenarios where consumers must evaluate loans based on multiple factors or loans that have differences for which the advantages and disadvantages are not easily discernible. So, each loan included many elements that required the respondents to make trade-offs as they decided between loans in Part 1, Task 1 of the study. Similarly, in the final disclosures, neither Version A nor Version B was clearly a "better" loan than the loan presented in the initial disclosure. However, each final disclosure included multiple changes from the initial disclosure.

- For the easier fixed rate and easier adjustable rate loans, the changes included simple changes in interest rate, closing costs, or cash to close.
- For the more challenging fixed rate and more challenging adjustable rate loans, the changes included more complicated changes in loan product, loan amount, financed closing costs, interest rate, closing costs, or cash to close.

Site Locations

For this study, the CFPB team selected 20 sites from each of the Census Bureau regions and sub-regions in the continental United States. In addition, some cities had a rural population within 50 miles of the site so the sample included variations of urban, suburban, and rural populations. We defined large cities as any with a DMA population greater than 5 million and medium cities with a population of 1 million or more and less than 5 million. Population figures are based on information at <http://www.censusbureau.gov/popest/data/metro/totals/2012>. See Figure 8. Site Locations below.

Recruitment

For the Quantitative Study, a sample of adults within the 20 selected DMAs was screened. To qualify for the main survey, respondents had to:

- be 18 years old or older;
- live in a household within 50 miles of the MSA/location used for the interview;
- have purchased or refinanced a home in the last five years or have never purchased or have not purchased or refinanced in the last five years and have the intent to purchase or refinance in the next two years; and
- agree to participate in the in-person interview.

Respondents were paid an incentive of $75.00 to compensate for travel time, expenses, and the session.

The screening for the main study period occurred between April 16, 2013, and June 12, 2013. Participants completed the main screener survey in 7 minutes (median). See Appendix D. Recruiting Script.

The completion rates for the screening questions and main interview, and the incidence/eligibility rate are presented in Table 5. Key Survey Response Statistics.

TABLE 5. Key Survey Response Statistics

| Key Survey Response Statistics | N Sampled | N Qualified Complete | Qualified Respondent in Home Rate |
|--------------------------------|-----------|----------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Pass All Screening Criteria | 10,761 | 1,030 | 9.6% |
| Not Qualified | 10,761 | 5,947 | 55.3% |
| Non-Responder | 10,761 | 3,553 | 33.0% |

In addition, in 231 homes, the screening survey was started but was incomplete and the potential respondent was determined to be “not qualified.” The total number of completed surveys in the field was 858. For those respondents who did not show up at the field facility for the interview, replacements were recruited at the site, using the Quantitative Study’s definition of experienced and inexperienced mortgage borrowers.

The Recruitment Panel

To recruit the sample population, the CFPB team used a probability-based web panel, the KnowledgePanel™, a proprietary panel operated by Knowledge Networks, within the DMA. KnowledgePanel is the first online research panel based on probability sampling covering both the online and offline populations in the United States. Although often used to recruit online survey respondents, the Quantitative Study used the panel to recruit respondents for in-person test groups in the 20 different DMAs—randomly selecting individuals within each market.

The KnowledgePanel

KnowledgePanel members are recruited through a nationally representative sample—at an unweighted level, originally by telephone and now exclusively through postal mail addressed-based sampling. Households receive access to the Internet and hardware if needed.¹⁸ See Appendix E. KnowledgePanel Background.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (January–June 2010), approximately 28.6% of all United States households cannot be contacted through random digit dialing (RDD) sampling—26.6% because of cell-phone-only households (CPOHH) status and 2% because they have no telephone service whatsoever. Among some age segments, the RDD non-coverage would be substantial: 40% of young adults, ages 18–24, reside in CPOHHs, 51% of those ages 25–29 reside in CPOHHs, as do 40% of those ages 30–34.¹⁹

Because of these changing demographics, KnowledgePanel recruitment uses dual sampling frames that include both listed and unlisted telephone numbers, telephone and non-telephone households, and cell-phone-only households, as well as households with and without Internet access. Only persons sampled through these probability-based techniques are eligible to participate on KnowledgePanel. Unless invited to do so as part of these national samples, no one can volunteer to be on the panel. To offset attrition, multiple recruitment samples are fielded evenly throughout the calendar year.

The Consumers for Testing

In the recruitment script, we excluded from participation consumers who answered that they never intended to purchase or refinance a house because they were not a part of the intended target audience. We also excluded those who worked in the mortgage loan or title insurance industries, or who had participated in the earlier qualitative research on developing the proposed disclosures. We determined if respondents were experienced or inexperienced based on the following criteria:

19 Blumberg, S.J. and J.V. Luke. December 2010. Wireless substitution: Early release of estimates from the National Health Interview Survey, January–June 2010. National Center for Health Statistics. Available from: <http://www.cdc.gov/nchs/nhis.htm>.

- Respondents who stated that they had previously purchased or refinanced a house within the past 5 years were considered experienced. The study used a five-year time frame, rather than a shorter time frame, to acknowledge the difficulties of obtaining financing in 2010-2012 during the housing crisis when credit standards tightened. To further refine respondents' level of experience, we asked the potential respondents to identify how many times they had purchased a home with a mortgage loan or refinanced a mortgage loan.
- Respondents who had never purchased a home or who had not purchased or refinanced a home in the past 5 years and intended to do so in the next 2 years were considered inexperienced.

Experienced (424) and inexperienced (434) respondents were randomly assigned to the levels of the remaining factors, creating, within the $2 \times 2 \times 2 \times 2$ design, 16 cells with approximately equal numbers of respondents.

In addition, we recruited for a mix of respondents across standard demographics, including gender, age, marital status, education, household income, and location. Recruitment resulted in a balanced number of respondents in nearly all demographic categories.²⁰ See Table 6. Percentages of Demographic Characteristics of Respondents by Current and Proposed Disclosures. Further, recruitment resulted in an equally balanced number of respondents across the other categories, that is, fixed rate and adjustable rate loans, easier and more challenging loans, and experienced and inexperienced respondents.

20 Respondents skew somewhat toward higher education.

Quality Assurance Techniques

In a study of this complexity, quality assurance is of critical importance. For this project, we took precautions at multiple stages to ensure accuracy.

Loan Preparation

The CFPB team prepared the numbers for each loan. These numbers were checked internally and again by the Kleimann team as they filled in the disclosures for the testing. Because the current and proposed disclosures used the same numbers in their paired groups, the Kleimann team further checked that the numbers matched in each paired set of loans.

Rotations

Within each loan package, the order of the loans was varied in terms of the initial loan that was seen when removed from the package, which loan was used for Part 3, and the matching final disclosure that was used for Parts 4 and 5. The Kleimann team developed the rotations and the instructions for the rotations, and the data collection team lead checked each package as a final step.

Pretesting

The questionnaire had two rounds of pre-testing on February 27, 2013, in Bethesda, MD and on April 11, 2013, in Baltimore, MD. Nine respondents were recruited for each site and met the same recruiting criteria as described above. The proctor used the Proctor Script and worked with both individuals and small groups. Respondents looked at both the current and the proposed disclosure sets. The goal was to identify questions in which the phrasing was ambiguous, misleading, or resulted in responses we did not expect. In addition, we verified the timing of the 5 parts, the logistics of the packaging of the disclosures, and the length of time respondents using the current or proposed disclosures needed to complete the parts of the study.

Pretesting confirmed that respondents could comprehend the questions and provide usable responses, with only minor modifications necessary to the questionnaire and instructions. Although the overall length was appropriate at 60 minutes, we adjusted the time allotted to individual parts. Finally, the pretesting showed that the packaging was feasible and that the differences in time it took to complete a task with the current or proposed disclosures were not excessive.

Answer Keys

We developed multiple answer keys. First, each loan had different numbers. Second, for the current and proposed disclosures, the numbers presented on the disclosures were different due to numbers that could be rounded on the Loan Estimate. Third, the answer keys also provided the possible and acceptable answers to each question and reflected the difference in language about closing costs and settlement charges. As a result, the CFPB team developed separate answer keys and verified them with each loan package. These answer keys were used for entering the data. See Appendix F. Answer Key for a sample answer key.

Open-ended Coding for Questions 2 and 42

The CFPB team developed coding lists for each of the two open-ended questions, Questions 2 and 42. All open-ended questions were coded using standard market research industry standards. This included developing a code list using the first 40% of the responses. The responses were coded into like content categories or codes. The draft code list was reviewed by the CFPB team to determine if all codes were appropriate, expansive, and complete. Once the code list was approved, the coding team coded all open-ended responses. See Appendix G. Coding Lists.

Survey Cooperation

- A reminder letter was sent to scheduled respondents giving the time of the session and directions to the testing facility.
- A phone call reminder was made prior to the scheduled time.
- Email reminders to non-responders were sent every three days during the field period to encourage participation.

Data Cleaning of Parts 2, 3, and 4

- A closed end-cleaning program was written for each of the survey options based on the programming logic in the final questionnaires and any additional instructions provided by the project manager.
- The Data Processing team began writing the cleaning program as soon as the final data layout was available from the project team.
- The cleaning program checked that respondents had followed the correct skip logic according to the final questionnaire provided.
- The program confirmed that the correct punches were present for all questions that should be answered and conversely that questions that should be skipped were blank in the data file.
- Any errors found were addressed before a final clean file was output. This included going back to the original survey documents to make sure the proper code was given to each respondent answer.
- Apart from the standard cleaning, we used the answer keys provided by the CFPB to assist in the data clean to finalize skip patterns and appropriate answer ranges to count as a correct answer. The answer keys were also used to design the scoring system as described in the report. We created a special data tabulation banner of the 32 questionnaire versions in order to confirm the answer keys and to confirm the scoring system.
- Once the cleaning process was complete, the data was merged with the open-end code data.

Data Coding

- Members of GfK's Public Affairs and Corporate Communications Team, along with support from GfK's Government and Academic Research practice, managed the data collection, data processing, and data delivery tasks for this study. The data collection team leader, a key member of the CFPB Quantitative Study team, was responsible for the overall management of this project and the senior research director was responsible for in-field data collection management and all data processing tasks, including the delivery of the final data sets and scoring cross tabulations.
- The data collection team leader and senior research director both monitored the implementation of the study and provided a quality assurance oversight role to ensure that the study was conducted according to the study's design. Upon completion of the data collection in the field, data entry staffers entered all questionnaires, including all open- and close- ended questions, and imported respondent demographic information from the KnowledgePanel database to finalize each respondent record. Those records were then checked for accuracy and cleaned of any personally identifiable information (PII) before being included in the final data set. The data files were then fitted for additional analysis through the development of analytical banners/crosstabs by demographics (age, region, household income, gender), behavioral metrics (experienced/inexperienced), and characteristics of the loan disclosure (fixed/adjustable rate, easier/more challenging) from the screening and in-field questionnaires. The final cross-tabulation banners were checked and cleaned before final delivery to the CFPB.

Results

As noted earlier, this study involved 5 distinct parts to the questionnaire and 6 tasks within those parts. The heart of our study was focused on Questions 3 through 41, which occurred in Parts 2, 3, and 4, and included Tasks 2, 3, 4, and 5. See Table 2. Key Topics, Questionnaire Parts, Tasks, and Related Questions for a matching of questions to parts and tasks. For this chapter, we focus first on the results in Parts 2, 3, and 4 (Tasks 2-5) and then on Part 1 (Task 1).²¹

Plan of Analyses for Parts 2, 3, and 4

For Parts 2, 3, and 4, each respondent for both current and proposed disclosures answered a total of 39 questions (Question 3 through Question 41) that could be scored as having been answered correctly or incorrectly based on the answer keys. For each question, respondents were assigned a score of "1" if they answered the question correctly or if they were required to skip the 21 We have excluded an analysis of Question 42 and Questions 43 through 48 from this report. For Question 42—"Do you have any comments about the final loan terms and costs?"—respondents provided relatively few useful responses; 45.6% left the question blank; 12.5% gave "nothing" (or a variation of such) as their response. For the scale rating questions (Questions 43 through 48), responses were inconsistent. We included reverse wording in these questions following conservative psychometric practice. Four items used an agreement scale to rate whether a task was "easy" to perform and two other items used the same agreement scale to rate whether a task was "hard" to perform. Initial results showed that the scale and item wording may have confused respondents. Schriesheim and Hill (1981) observe that these "confused" responses are often not caused by true, underlying constructs, but are an artifact of the way in which people respond to those items. Respondents can respond inaccurately because they are confused by the negative wording, or because they are careless and read negative items similarly to positive ones. As a result, we excluded these questions from the analysis as well.

question because of a correct answer to a prior question. Respondents were assigned a score of "0" if they failed to answer the question correctly or if they were required to skip the question based on an incorrect answer to a prior question. Multiple correct answers were possible for a few questions (for example, Question 17). For these, respondents could receive partial credit (for example, a score of $\frac{1}{2}$).

Our analysis centered primarily on the accuracy scores assigned to respondents for these 39 key questions.

1. We looked at accuracy of responses with current versus proposed disclosures based on aggregate measures computed across all of the questions in Parts 2, 3, and 4. This analysis is similar to the analysis reported by the FTC in its mortgage disclosure study in 2007.²²
2. We looked at several sub-aggregate analyses that focused on questions grouped by the parts and tasks performed by respondents and by specific content areas covered by the questions (for example, amortization, interest rate, and so on).
3. We examined the more detailed data generated by individual questions and whether the results varied by respondent experience levels, loan complexity, and loan type. The statistical comparison in these analyses was completed on a question-by-question basis and is akin to those reported by the FTC in their 2007 report.²³
4. For statistical testing, we compared points at the 95% confidence level using a two-tailed t-test. Most of the comparisons are based on subgroups of approximately 430 respondents. The Margin of Error (MOE) for these comparisons for responses around 50% at the 95% confidence level is ± 4.7 percentage points.

Aggregate Accuracy Results

Two aggregate indices designed to capture the overall accuracy of responses were created from scores assigned to the 39 individual questions. Both indices were intended to capture the percentage of correct responses that a respondent gave to the questions. However, they differed on how responses to questions that could be skipped were treated. One index was based on scores assigned to all 39 questions, while a second index was based only on the 29 "non-skippable" questions that all respondents were required to answer.

Table 7. Percentage of Questions Answered Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures: Aggregate Results compares the percentage of correct responses for respondents exposed to the current disclosures versus proposed disclosures based on these two indices. The upper half of the table displays results for the first index (based on 39 questions), while the lower half of the table shows comparable results for the second index (based on 29 "non-skippable" questions).

Notes: (1) Figures in parentheses are the number of respondents exposed to the current/proposed disclosures.
(2) A Student's t-test of significance (two-tailed) was used to test for differences in the average proportion of questions answered correctly, with * indicating significance at the five percent level.

In the results for the first index, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 59.3% of all 39 questions correctly. The corresponding percentage for respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures was 76.2% of all 39 questions answered correctly. The difference (16.9 percentage points) was statistically significant²⁴ and persisted when we looked at it separately within subgroups. For example, although experienced respondents performed better overall than inexperienced respondents (about 6 percentage points better, on average), the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures by an approximately 17 percentage point margin within each of these two groups. A similar pattern was evident when we looked at the results for easier versus more challenging loans and for fixed rate versus adjustable rate loans.

²⁴ Here and throughout this report, by "statistically significant" we mean at the five percent level based on a two-tailed test.

In each instance, the difference in performance for respondents exposed to the current versus the proposed disclosures was in the 16 to 17.8 percentage point range in favor of the proposed disclosures.

Results for the second index showed a virtually identical pattern, except that the difference in performance for respondents exposed to the current versus the proposed disclosures was marginally smaller (14.8 percentage point advantage across all respondents) and in the 13.8 to 15.9 percentage point range in favor of the proposed disclosures across the subgroups.

In sum, both aggregate indices showed a statistically significant performance advantage of approximately 16 percentage points for the proposed disclosures. Furthermore, this advantage was quite similar in magnitude for experienced as well as inexperienced respondents, easier as well as more challenging loans, and fixed rate as well as adjustable rate loans (a 13.8 to 17.8 percentage point range advantage).

Results Grouped by Part and Task

In Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the questionnaire, the complete set of 39 questions (as well as the subset of 29 non-skippable questions) was divided into four groups corresponding to four distinct tasks within those parts (Part 2-Task 2, Part 3-Task 3, Part 4-Task 4, and Part 4-Task 5) performed by respondents during the study. In this section, we compare the performance of the current and proposed disclosures separately for questions within each of these tasks. For our discussion, we have broken out each part and task and placed questions in the order of the highest difference to the lowest difference. Appendix H. Table 8. Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures—Grouped by Task shows a complete table of results.²⁵

Part 2. Task 2. Comparison of Initial Disclosures for Two Loans

For Part 1, Task 1, respondents examined initial disclosures for two loans (two initial TILA disclosures and two GFEs for current disclosures or two Loan Estimates for the proposed disclosures), made a choice, and listed reasons for that choice. For Part 2, Task 2, respondents answered a series of 8 questions involving comparisons between the terms and costs associated with the two loans from Task 1. These questions included Questions 3 through 10. The non-skippable questions were Questions 3 through 8 with the 2 skippable questions asking for more detail about Question 8.

Table 8.1. Part 2, Task 2. Comparison of Initial Disclosures: Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 57.3% of the 8 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 81.4% of the questions correctly (difference = 24.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 6 non-skippable measures were similar (63.8% for current disclosures, 83.3% for proposed disclosures, difference = 19.5 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

²⁵ For this section, we have divided Table 8 into four smaller tables relevant to the discussion.

Table 8.1 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered all 8 of the questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 7 of 8 questions and was relatively large (20 or more) for 4 of 8 questions. For non-skippable questions, the difference in percentages of correct responses was statistically significant for 5 of 6 questions and was relatively large (20 or more) for 2 of 6 questions.

Part 3. Task 3. Comprehension of Initial Disclosure for One Loan

In Part 3 of the study, respondents answered 16 questions about the terms and costs detailed in the initial disclosure for one of the two loans they had just compared (one GFE and initial TILA disclosure for the current disclosures or one Loan Estimate for the proposed disclosures). These questions included Questions 11 through 26. The 14 non-skippable questions included all except Questions 14 and 26, both of which asked for more detail about the previous question.

Table 8.2. Part 3, Task 3. Comprehension of Initial Disclosure: Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percent Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 70.0% of the 16 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 80.5% of the questions correctly (difference = 10.5 percentage points). The comparable results for the 14 non-skippable questions were somewhat weaker but still in favor of the proposed disclosures (74.0% for current disclosures, 80.9% for proposed disclosures, difference = 6.9 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 8.2 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 12 of the 16 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 9 of 16 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures, and for 1 of 16 questions in favor of the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 4 of 16 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures and for 1 of 16 questions in favor of the current disclosures. For the non-skippable questions, the difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 7 of 14 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures, and for 1 of 14 questions in favor of the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 3 of 14 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures and for 1 of 14 questions in favor of the current disclosures.

Part 4. Task 4. Comparison of Initial Disclosure and Final Disclosure for One Loan

In Part 4 of the study, respondents were given a final disclosure for the same loan they had used in Part 3 (one HUD-1 disclosure and one final TILA disclosure for the current disclosures or one Closing Disclosure for the proposed disclosures). They answered 8 questions requiring a comparison between the two disclosures. These questions included Questions 28 through 35. The 4 non-skippable questions were Questions 28, 30, 32, and 34 with each skippable question asking for more detail about the previous question.

Table 8.3. Part 4, Task 4. Comparison of Initial and Final Disclosure: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 54.9% of the 8 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 69.0% of the 8 questions correctly (difference = 14.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 4 non-skippable questions were somewhat stronger in favor of the proposed disclosures (61.6% for current disclosures, 79.0% for proposed disclosures, difference = 17.4 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 8.3 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered all 8 of 8 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 5 of 8 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures, and was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 2 of 8 questions. For the non-skippable questions, the difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for all 4 of the 4 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures and was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 1 of the 4 questions.

Part 4. Task 5. Comprehension of Final Disclosure for One Loan

Part 4 of the study also included 7 questions focused solely on the final disclosure document (one HUD-1 disclosure and one final TILA disclosure for the current disclosures or one Closing Disclosure for the proposed disclosure). The 7 questions included Question 27 and Questions 36 through 41. The 5 non-skippable questions included Questions 27, 36, 37, 38, and 39.

Table 8.4. Part 4, Task 5. Comprehension of Final Disclosure: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 42.1% of the 7 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 68.5% of the 7 questions correctly (difference = 26.4 percentage points). The comparable results for the 5 non-skippable questions were somewhat stronger in favor of the proposed disclosures (40.7% for current disclosures, 69.8% for proposed disclosures, difference = 29.1 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 8.4 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered all 7 of 7 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 7 of 7 of the questions and 5 of 5 non-skippable questions, and was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 5 of 7 questions and for 4 of 5 non-skippable questions.

Summary

The data in Tables 8.1 - 8.4 show that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of the four tasks performed by respondents in the study. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures varied from 26.4 percentage points (for comprehension of final disclosures) to 10.1 percentage points (for comprehension of initial disclosures).

Results Grouped by Specific Loan Concepts

In Parts 2, 3, and 4 of the study, the complete set of 39 questions (as well as the subset of 29 non-skippable questions) was divided into 8 groups corresponding to 8 distinct loan-related concepts or terms. These concept areas included amortization, annual percentage rate (APR), closing costs/settlement charges, escrow account, interest rate, loan amount, monthly payments, and mortgage insurance. A ninth area — risk factor — included questions from several of the other 8 concept areas. See Table 2: Key Topics, Questionnaire Parts, Tasks, and Related Questions.

Appendix I. Table 9. Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures — Grouped by Concept shows a complete table of results.²⁶ Table 9 also shows the 8 questions that are related to respondent comprehension of risk factors associated with the loan.

In this section, we compare the performance of the current and proposed disclosures separately for questions focused on each of these nine concept areas. For our discussion below, we have broken out each concept and placed questions in the order of the highest difference to the lowest difference.

Concept 1. Amortization

The study included three questions on amortization. These questions included questions 20, 22, and 24 — all from Part 3 of the study and all were non-skippable questions. Table 9.1: Amortization: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 68.5% of these questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 76.1% of the questions correctly (difference = 7.6 percentage points). This difference was statistically significant.

Table 9.1 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered all 3 of 3 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 1 of the 3 questions, and was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for none of the questions.

²⁶ For this section, we have divided Table 9 into nine smaller tables relevant to the concept discussion.

TABLE 9.1. Amortization: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference)

| Amortization Question Number | Current Disclosures (N=428) | Proposed Disclosures (N=430) | Percentage Point Difference |
|--|-----------------------------|------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Average for 3 Questions (all non-skippable) | 68.5% | 76.1% | 7.6* |
| Principal Paid Off in 5 Years – Q24 | 59.1% | 78.6% | 19.5* |
| Final Payment Timing – Q20 | 93.2% | 94.9% | 1.7 |
| Refinance Cost – Q22 | 53.3% | 54.9% | 1.6 |

Notes: (1) Figures in parentheses in the title are the number of respondents exposed to the current/proposed disclosures. (2) A Student's t-test of significance (two-tailed) was used to test for differences in proportions (for individual questions) as well as for differences in averages, with * indicating significance at the five percent level.

Concept 2. Annual Percentage Rate (APR)

The study included 2 non-skippable questions on APR. The questions included Questions 7 and 23 from Parts 2 and 3.

Table 9.2. Annual Percentage Rate (APR): Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 74.4% of the 2 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 83.6% of the 2 questions correctly (difference = 9.2 percentage points). This difference was statistically significant.

Table 9.2 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered both questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 1 of the 2 questions, and the difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for none of the questions.

| APR Question Number | Current Disclosures (N=428) | Proposed Disclosures (N=430) | Percentage Point Difference |
|---|-----------------------------|------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Average for 2 Questions (both non-skippable) | 74.4% | 83.6% | 9.2* |
| APR – Q23 | 65.7% | 79.5% | 13.8* |
| APR – Q7 | 83.2% | 87.7% | 4.5 |

Notes: (1) Figures in parentheses in the title are the number of respondents exposed to the current/proposed disclosures. (2) A Student's t-test of significance (two-tailed) was used to test for differences in proportions (for individual questions) as well as for differences in averages, with * indicating significance at the five percent level.

Concept 3. Closing Costs/Settlement Charges

The study included 7 questions on closing costs/settlement charges with 6 non-skippable questions. The 7 questions included Questions 5, 16, 17, 19, 32, 33, and 36 which were spread across Parts, 2, 3, and 4 of the questionnaire. All questions were non-skippable except Question 33.

Table 9.3: Closing Costs/Settlement Charges: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 66.5% of the 7 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 72.9% of the 7 questions correctly (difference = 6.4 percentage points). The comparable results for the 6 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (69.8% for current disclosures, 77.1% for proposed disclosures, difference = 7.3 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 9.3 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 5 of 7 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 4 of 7 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures. For the non-skippable questions, respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 4 of 6 questions more accurately than respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 4 of 6 non-skippable questions.

Two of 7 questions and 2 of 6 non-skippable questions were answered more accurately in favor of the current disclosures, and 1 of these was statistically significant.

Finally, the difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) in favor of the proposed disclosures for 2 of 7 questions and 2 of 6 non-skippable questions. By comparison, the difference was relatively large for 1 of 7 questions and 1 of 6 non-skippable questions in favor of the current disclosures.

(3) An  marks a skippable question.

Concept 4. Escrow Account

The study included 4 questions on escrow account with 3 non-skippable questions. The questions included Questions 6, 21, 34, and 35 from Parts 2, 3, and 4. Only Question 35 was skippable.

Table 9.4. Escrow Account: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 63.4% of the 4 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 71.5% of the 4 questions correctly (difference = 8.1 percentage points). The comparable results for the 6 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (66.6% for current disclosures, 75.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 8.8 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 9.4 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 3 of 4 questions (2 of 3 non-skippable questions) more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 2 of 4 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures, and for 0 of 4 questions in favor of the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 2 of 3 non-skippable questions. Finally, the difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for none of the questions.

(2) A Student's t-test of significance (two-tailed) was used to test for differences in proportions (for individual questions) as well as for differences in averages, with * indicating significance at the five percent level. (3) An  marks a skippable question.

Concept 5. Interest Rate

The study included 6 questions on interest rate with 4 non-skippable questions. These questions included Questions 4, 12, 13, 14, 30, and 31 from Parts 2, 3, and 4; the non-skippable questions included Questions 4, 12, 13, and 30. Table 9.5: Interest Rate: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 81.9% of the 6 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 86.6% of the 6 questions correctly (difference = 4.7 percentage points). The comparable results for the 4 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (87.0% for current disclosures, 91.2% for proposed disclosures, difference = 4.2 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 9.5 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered all 6 of 6 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 4 of 6 of the questions (3 of 4 non-skippable questions), and was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for none of the 6 questions.

(3) An  marks a skippable question.

Concept 6. Loan Amount

The study included 6 questions on loan amount with 5 non-skippable questions. Questions included Questions 3, 11, 27, 28, 29, and 37 from Parts 2, 3, and 4; only Question 29 was a skippable question. Table 9.6: Loan Amount: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 44.4% of the 6 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 79.6% of the 6 questions correctly (difference = 35.2 percentage points). For the 5 non-skippable questions, the comparable results were somewhat better for both disclosures (47.4% for current disclosures, 83.0% for proposed disclosures, difference = 35.6 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Concept 7. Monthly Payments

The study included 9 questions on monthly payments with 5 of them being non-skippable. These questions included Questions 8, 9, 10, 15, 18, 38, 39, 40, and 41. The 5 non-skippable questions included Questions 8, 15, 18, 38, and 39 spread across Parts 2, 3, and 4.

Table 9.7. Monthly Payments: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 46.1% of the 9 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 70.9% of the 9 questions correctly (difference = 24.8 percentage points). The comparable results for the 5 non-skippable questions were similar, although the difference was smaller (49.7% for current disclosures, 71.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 21.7 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 9.7 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 8 of 9 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 8 of 9 questions in favor of the proposed disclosures, and 0 of 9 questions in favor of the current disclosures.

For the non-skippable questions, the difference in the percentages of correct responses was statistically significant for 4 of 5 non-skippable questions. The difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 7 of 9 questions and for 4 of 5 non-skippable questions.

(2) A Student's t-test of significance (two-tailed) was used to test for differences in proportions (for individual questions) as well as for differences in the averages, with * indicating significance at the five percent level. (3) An  marks a skippable question.

Concept 8. Mortgage Insurance

The study included 2 questions on mortgage insurance. The questions included Questions 25 and 26, both from Part 3. Question 25 was non-skippable.

Table 9.8. Mortgage Insurance: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 32.7% of the 2 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 71.1% of the 2 questions correctly (difference = 38.4 percentage points). However, this large difference was due entirely to one of the two questions that was skippable (Q26). The difference was statistically significant.

Table 9.8 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered both questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for both questions, and the difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for one of the two questions.

(3) An  marks a skippable question.

Concept 9. Risk Factors

The study included 8 questions in risk-related loan characteristics, such as change in interest rates or change in loan amount after closing. These questions included Questions 10, 13, 15, 21, 22, 24, 37, and 39. All questions were non-skippable except Question 10.

Table 9.9. Risk Factors: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) shows that, on average, respondents exposed to the current disclosures answered 64.6% of the 8 questions correctly, while respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 76.0% of the 8 questions correctly (difference = 11.6 percentage points). The comparable results for the 7 non-skippable questions were somewhat better for both disclosures (68.4% for current disclosures, 76.4% for proposed disclosures, difference = 8.0 percentage points). Both differences were statistically significant.

Table 9.9 also shows that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures answered 6 of 8 questions more accurately than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 4 of the 8 questions, and the difference was relatively large (20 percentage points or more) for 2 of 8 questions. The difference in the percentage of correct responses was statistically significant for 3 of 7 non-skippable questions.

Summary

The data in Tables 9.1 – 9.9 show that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of the nine loan concept areas (including risk factors) addressed by the study. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures ranged from 35.2 (for loan amount) to 4.7 percentage points difference (for interest rate).

Results Broken Down by Experience, Loan Type, and Loan Complexity

In this section, we examine whether the relatively superior performance associated with the proposed disclosures varied with the experience level of the respondent (experienced versus inexperienced respondent), loan complexity (easier versus more challenging loans), and loan type (fixed rate versus adjustable rate loans), or was largely independent of these factors.

Table 10. Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures: Broken Down by Respondent Experience, Loan Complexity, and Loan Type provides a detailed breakdown of percentage of correct responses for each of the 39 questions in the study. The data were presented separately for experienced versus inexperienced respondents, easier versus more challenging loans, and fixed rate versus adjustable rate loans, and the questions are grouped by task.

Overall, Table 10 suggests that while there were some variations in results across respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type for particular questions, the data were fairly similar especially for Tasks 2, 3, and 5. For example, when we examined the average data for the 8 questions in Task 2 (comparison of initial disclosures), the difference between accuracy levels for the proposed versus current disclosures were in a fairly narrow range of 15.1 to 33.0 percentage points when compared across respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type levels.

A similar conclusion emerged for the average data for Task 3 (comprehension of initial disclosure) with a range of 8.4 to 12.7 percentage points, and Task 5 (comprehension of final disclosure) with a range of 19.5 to 33.2 percentage points. However, the variation was somewhat larger for Task 4 (comparison of initial and final disclosures) with a range of 4.7 to 23.4 percentage points, suggesting larger differences in accuracy of responses to these questions within subgroups. For example, there appeared to be considerable variation in accuracy of responses to Questions 28, 29, 30, 31, and 34 for easier versus more challenging loans.

Table 11. Summary Data Comparisons Between Current and Proposed Disclosures: Broken Down by Respondent Experience, Loan Complexity, and Loan Type provides a different, more aggregate view on the same issue. This table compares the proportion of questions (out of 39, or 29 non-skippable questions) for which the proposed disclosures had a higher accuracy score than the current disclosures for different levels of respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type. The proportion was computed three different ways – (1) based simply on higher accuracy scores, (2) based on higher scores that are significantly different at $p < .05$, and (3) based on scores that are higher by 20 percentage points or more.

The results on all three measures were very similar across the subgroups. For example, the data showed that the proportion of questions for which the percentage of correct responses were higher for the proposed disclosures ranged from 30 of 39 or 76.9% (for fixed rate loans) to 35 of 39 or 89.7% for inexperienced respondents, as well as for more challenging loans. Similarly, the proportion of questions for which the percentage of correct responses for the 29 non-skippable questions were statistically significantly higher for the proposed disclosures ranged from 17 of 29 or 58.6% (for more challenging loans) to 19 of 29 or 65.5% (for easier loans and for experienced respondents). In general, these data suggested that the magnitude of accuracy performance advantage for the proposed disclosures over the current disclosures was fairly consistent across levels of respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type.

Responses to Part 1, Task 1. Open-Ended Question

Plan of Analysis for Part 1

We also examined responses to the open-ended question (Question 2) in Part 1, Task 1 that asked respondents to provide reasons for their choice of loan in Part 1 of the study. We focused on the total number of reasons and comments provided by respondents as a function of the initial disclosure (current versus proposed) they examined. Although not the central focus of our analyses, these data can shed light on the degree to which the current and proposed disclosures differentially influenced the ability of respondents to develop and articulate reasons justifying or explaining their selection.

In Part 1 of the study, respondents first made a selection between two loans based on the initial disclosure about each loan (Question 1) and then provided reasons for their selection (Question 2). Out of the 858 study respondents, 852 provided at least one reason or comment, while 4 respondents said “don’t know” and 2 respondents did not say anything. Respondents provided a variety of comments and arguments including comments about loan terms, costs, and risk factors, comments about the disclosures themselves, and comments related to personal experiences.

In this section, we examine the differences, if any, in the total number of reasons and comments provided by respondents as a function of the current or proposed initial disclosure they examined. This measure was intended to suggest the degree to which the current and proposed disclosures differentially influenced the ability of respondents to develop and state reasons justifying or explaining their selection.

Results

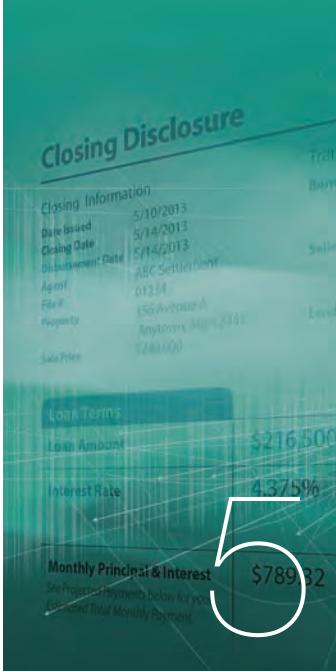

Table 12. Part 1, Task 1. Mean Number of Mentions in Response to Question 2 Asking About Reasons for Choice compares the average number of comments by respondents exposed to the current disclosures versus the proposed disclosures. Overall, respondents using the current disclosures made an average of 2.68 comments. The corresponding average for respondents using the proposed disclosures was 3.09. The difference (0.41) was statistically significant. Furthermore, the difference persisted when we looked at it separately within subgroups. For example, although experienced respondents generated more comments, on average, than did inexperienced respondents (3.02 versus 2.68, difference significant at $p < .05$), the proposed disclosures significantly outperformed the current disclosures by approximately the same margin within each of these two groups.

A similar pattern was evident when we looked at the results for easier versus more challenging loans and for fixed rate versus adjustable rate loans. In each instance, the difference in performance for respondents exposed to the current versus the proposed disclosures was in favor of the proposed disclosures and was statistically significant. These results suggest that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures were able to articulate and explain more reasoning behind their choice, and this was the case regardless of their level of experience, the difficulty of the loan, and whether the loan was a fixed rate or adjustable rate loan.

Conclusions

The results of the study lead to several conclusions, all of them in favor of the proposed disclosures:

1. The proposed disclosures performed better than the current disclosures when compared on the accuracy of responses to 39 key questions and 29 non-skippable questions on aggregate measures;
2. The performance advantage for the proposed disclosures was consistent across Tasks 2-5 performed by respondents;
3. The performance advantage for the proposed disclosures was consistent across all content areas;
4. The performance advantage for the proposed disclosures was similar across the factors of the study: for experienced as well as inexperienced respondents, easier as well as more challenging loans, and fixed as well as adjustable rate loans; and
5. Respondents who received the proposed disclosures generated more reasons and comments when prompted to explain their loan choice, suggesting that the proposed disclosures might enable respondents to better articulate and explain the rationale for their decisions.

Conclusion 1. The Proposed Disclosures Performed Better on Aggregate Measures

We created two aggregate indices designed to capture the overall accuracy of responses to the 39 key questions. One index was based on scores assigned to all 39 questions, while a second index was based only on the 29 “non-skippable” questions that all respondents were required to answer. Both aggregate indices showed a significant performance advantage of about 16 percentage points for the proposed disclosures. See Table 7: Percentage of Questions Answered Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures: Aggregate Results.

We also examined the number of questions (out of all 39 questions as well as 29 non-skippable questions) that showed a performance advantage for the proposed disclosures. See Table 11: Summary Data Comparisons Between Current and Proposed Disclosures: Broken Down by Respondent Experience, Loan Complexity, and Loan Type. The results showed that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures on 35 of 39 questions and 25 of 29 non-skippable questions (89.7% and 86.2%, respectively). Furthermore, the performance advantage for the proposed disclosures was statistically significant for 28 of 39 questions and 21 of 29 non-skippable questions (71.8% and 72.4%, respectively). In comparison, the current disclosures outperformed the proposed disclosures for 4 of 39 questions and 4 of 29 non-skippable questions (10.3% and 13.8%, respectively), and only one of these differences in favor of the current disclosures was statistically significant.

Conclusion 2. The Proposed Disclosures, On Average, Performed Better for Tasks 2 through 5

We compared the performance of the current and proposed disclosures separately for questions within each of the four distinct tasks – comparing two initial loan disclosures, reviewing a single initial loan disclosure, comparing an initial disclosure with a final disclosure, and comprehending a final disclosure. The results showed that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of these four tasks. See Tables 8.1-8.4 and Appendix H. Table 8: Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly with Current and Proposed Disclosures—Grouped by Task. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures ranged from 26.4 percentage points (for comprehension of the final disclosure) to 10.5 percentage points (for review of initial disclosures).

Conclusion 3. The Proposed Disclosures, On Average, Performed Better for All Concept Areas

We also compared the performance of the current and proposed disclosures separately for questions focused on nine different loan concept areas. See Tables 9.1 through 9.9 and Appendix I. Table 9: Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly with Current and Proposed Disclosures—Grouped by Concept. These areas were amortization, loan amount, interest rate, monthly payments, closing costs, escrow account, annual percentage rate (APR), mortgage insurance, and risk factors. The results showed that the proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures consistently for each of these nine loan concept areas addressed by the study. On average, the advantage for the proposed disclosures ranged from 35.2 percentage points (for loan amount) to 4.7 percentage points (for interest rate).

Conclusion 4. The Proposed Disclosures Performed Better Regardless of Respondent Experience, Loan Type, or Loan Complexity

We examined whether the relatively superior performance associated with the proposed disclosures varied with the experience level of the respondents (experienced versus inexperienced respondents), loan complexity (easier versus more challenging loans), and/or loan type (fixed rate versus adjustable rate loans), or was largely independent of these factors.

We conducted several different analyses to address this question. In general, our results across the analyses were fairly consistent in indicating that the performance advantage for the proposed disclosures did not vary by level of respondent experience, loan type, or loan complexity. For example, our aggregate analysis based on responses to 39 questions (Table 7: Percentage of Questions Answered Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures: Aggregate Results) showed a performance advantage for the proposed disclosures that was within a fairly narrow range (16 to 17.8 percentage points) for experienced as well as inexperienced respondents, easier as well as more challenging loans, and fixed rate as well as adjustable rate loans. Similarly, when we looked at the proportion of questions for which the proposed disclosures had a performance advantage across different types of respondents and loans, we found that the range across these groups was fairly narrow – between 30 and 35 (out of 39) questions for which the proposed disclosures performed better, and between 21 and 28 questions for which they performed significantly better. See Table 11: Summary Data Comparisons Between Current and Proposed Disclosures: Broken Down by Respondent Experience, Loan Complexity, and Loan Type. Finally, when we looked at the accuracy of responses to individual questions, we found (with some exceptions) reasonable consistency of responses to most questions – especially for Tasks 2, 3, and 5. See Table 10: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly With Current Versus Proposed Disclosures: Broken Down by Experience, Loan Complexity, and Loan Type. Overall, these results suggested that the superior performance associated with the proposed disclosures was fairly consistent across different levels of respondent experience, loan complexity, and loan type.

Conclusion 5. Respondents Using the Proposed Disclosure Listed More Comments While Explaining Their Choice

We examined the mean number of comments made by respondents using the current disclosures versus the proposed disclosures when they explained their choice between two loans. Overall, respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures made statistically significantly more comments than did respondents exposed to the current disclosures (average of 3.09 versus 2.68 comments). Furthermore, the difference was about the same when we looked at it separately within subgroups. These results suggested that respondents exposed to the proposed disclosures were more likely to be better able to state and explain the reasoning behind their choice.

Limitations

Two features of the study that limit the generalizability of the results should be noted. First, the sampling was done in each of the 20 DMAs to be as representative of each DMA as possible, with the only real limitation being rural respondents. Rural populations may be under-represented in the sample due to the on-site, in-person data collection method, as these sites may have been too far for respondents to want to drive to to participate at the incentive level offered. Second, the study was a controlled experiment conducted in a supervised, distraction-free environment. Although respondents generally had enough time to complete the various tasks at their own pace, time limits were imposed on each part of the study to keep total session length to approximately 60 minutes. The extent to which these results will replicate in noisy, distracting, real-world settings with no externally imposed time limits is unclear. This is an interesting conjecture worthy of assessment in future research.

The Importance of Consumer Testing

The Mortgage Disclosure Project shows the advantages and benefits of two types of consumer testing: Qualitative Testing and Quantitative Testing.

Qualitative Testing

The Qualitative Study for the Mortgage Disclosure Project ensured that consumers could comprehend the basic facts about a loan, could compare two initial disclosures and state their reasons for making that choice. Further, it allowed the development of the companion Closing Disclosure to enable better comparison between the initial and final disclosures. Including industry representatives allowed us to ensure that industry personnel could understand the disclosures and explain them to consumers. The CFPB understands that consumers do not obtain or close loans in isolation and often discuss the disclosures with loan officers and settlement agents. As a supplement to the Qualitative Testing, the public posting of the design iterations further allowed the CFPB to anticipate concerns these stakeholders might have.

Quantitative Testing

The Quantitative Study for the Mortgage Disclosure Project looked at both the current and the proposed disclosures. As the FTC study states, in advocating for studies with a control group:

The tests may show, for example, that a proposed disclosure is not understood by a significant proportion of consumers but a control group might make clear that this is still a substantial improvement over the current disclosures. Conversely, the tests may show that nearly all consumers understand a proposed disclosure, but a control group might show that the same is true for the current disclosures, indication that the revisions provide little benefit.²⁷

²⁷ Lacko and Pappalardo, 2007, p.128.

The Quantitative Study shows that the proposed disclosures indeed provide benefits to consumers. The proposed disclosures outperformed the current disclosures from nearly every perspective. The differences between the current and proposed disclosures were statistically significant whether considering experienced versus inexperienced respondents, easier versus more challenging loans, or fixed versus adjustable rate loans. In a question-by-question breakdown by task, the proposed disclosures performed better for 35 of the 39 questions, and for 28 of those 35 questions the differences were statistically significant. In addition, 19 questions for the proposed disclosures had a percentage point difference of 20 percentage points or more in contrast to only 1 question for the current disclosures. In fact, for only 4 questions did the current disclosures perform better and only one of those was statistically significant—Question 16.²⁸

In this respect the Quantitative Study provided an additional advantage to the CFPB, as it enabled the CFPB to examine the results of Question 16 and further improve the integrated disclosures before it issued the final rule.

The Qualitative Study and the Quantitative Study have accomplished what the FTC study also advocated:

The development of effective consumer disclosures requires careful analysis of what information consumers really need, how consumers will interpret and use the information, how to convey the information in a way that can be easily understood and used by consumers, and, combining all of this, careful analysis of the benefits and costs of the disclosures. Consumer testing is a critical part of this analysis.²⁹

²⁸ The results for Questions 16 prompted some modification in the proposed disclosures. These modifications are detailed in Chapter 6 of this report and in Kleimann Communication Group, November 20, 2013, Post-Proposal Consumer Testing.

²⁹ Lacko and Pappalardo, 2007, p. 128

The Final Disclosures

The integrated Loan Estimate and the integrated Closing Disclosure were developed under one phase of the Mortgage Disclosure Project.³⁰ As part of that project, the team tested the disclosures in 10 rounds of qualitative testing prior to issuing the Proposed Rule on July 9, 2012 (5 rounds for the Loan Estimate, 2 rounds for the Closing Disclosure, and 3 rounds for the interaction of the two disclosures). An analysis of the comments received during the public comment period resulted in the CFPB team making some additional changes to the proposed disclosures as indicated in Chapter 1.

The Quantitative Study, Phase 2 of the Mortgage Disclosure Project, revealed one question in which the current disclosures significantly outperformed the proposed disclosures. Based on the language used on the disclosure, Question 16 asked respondents for the current initial disclosure: "How much are your estimated settlement charges?" and asked respondents for the proposed initial disclosure: "How much are your estimated closing costs?" In the design of the GFE, Summary of your settlement charges is a prominent heading on page 1, but the Cash to Close amount is not included on the GFE. In contrast, the design of the proposed Loan Estimate deliberately places Estimated Cash to Close in a prominent heading. Closing Costs are present, but are de-emphasized by being placed in a smaller font to the right of the Estimated Cash to Close amount. The concept of closing costs/settlement charges is important, and the CFPB team wanted to include a question on the concept. However, because the cash to close amount was not on the GFE, the CFPB team chose to ask a question about closing costs/settlement charges, rather than about the cash needed to close.

³⁰ See Kleimann Communication Group, July 2012.

The CFPB team anticipated that respondents who worked with the GFE might perform better on this question, but did not anticipate the difference to be better at a statistically significant level. For respondents using the GFE, 86.2% answered this question correctly, but only 46.3% of respondents using the Loan Estimate answered this question correctly—a 39.9 percentage point difference. See Table 8.2: Part 3, Task 3.Comprehension of Initial Disclosures: Percentage of Respondents Answering Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference) and Table 9.3: Closing Costs/Settlement Charges: Percentage of Respondents Answering Questions Correctly with Current Versus Proposed Disclosures (Ordered by Percentage Point Difference).

Given that Question 16 was the only question in which the current disclosure performed statistically significantly better, the CFPB team did additional analysis by looking at the specific answers to this question. Across those viewing the Loan Estimate, 51.6% of the respondents provided the estimated cash to close amount and 46.3% respondents provided the closing costs amount. Only 2.1% of respondents provided an answer other than these two. Based on this analysis, we hypothesized that many respondents may have found the right location on the Loan Estimate, but assumed that the question was asking for the amount that the disclosure design emphasized.

To deal with this issue, the CFPB team decided to modify the design of the proposed initial disclosure and the proposed final disclosure in order to keep the two designs consistent. The Cash to Close section was renamed Costs at Closing and split into two rows—one for Closing Costs and one for Cash to Close. This change underwent further qualitative consumer testing in July 2013 in Baltimore, MD and Richmond, VA with 12 additional consumer participants to confirm that consumers could understand the changes.³¹ The testing indicated that the revised design was working as intended. The final disclosures—both the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure—reflect this change as well as the modifications discussed in Chapter 1 and are presented on the following pages with annotations.

³¹ See Kleimann Communication Group, November 20, 2013, Post-Proposal Consumer Testing.

Loan Estimate Details

The design of the final Loan Estimate allows sufficient flexibility for the disclosure of fixed rate loans as well as adjustable rate and interest only loans on a standard form. It is also able to show loans with certain other features, such as negative amortization, a balloon payment, or a prepayment penalty. The design uses a simple structure for the three-page disclosure that places a one-page summary of the Loan Terms, Projected Payments, and Costs at Closing in front of the detailed information on pages 2 and 3:

- Page 1 provides a summary of the key Loan Terms, Projected Payments, and Costs at Closing. The page contains separate sections that show the basic Loan Terms, including the Monthly Principal & Interest payment and Loan Costs. Two sections provide consumers with affordability information. For example, it provides a schedule of Projected Payments. Including the Estimated Taxes, Insurance & Assessments on the property. It also shows the Costs at Closing, including Closing Costs and Cash to Close. If any of the basic Loan Terms can change after closing, a simple, yet easily visible, “yes” or “no” in bold font and capitalized letters provides that information. A series of bullets in that row provide details about any possible changes, including, for example, specific numbers for how high the change can be and a year for when the change can occur.
- Page 2 itemizes the costs associated with the loan and with the real estate transaction. It also provides a Calculating Cash to Close table to summarize the transaction costs. It also provides Adjustable Rate Table and Adjustable Payment Table when needed.
- Page 3 provides three figures that consumers can use to compare loan offers: In 5 Years, the Annual Percentage Rate (APR), and the Total Interest Percentage (TIP). It also lists disclosures mandated by statute, including new disclosures required by the Dodd-Frank Act. These disclosures can include Appraisal, Assumption, Homeowner’s Insurance, Late Payments, Loan Acceptance, Liability after Foreclosure, Refinancing, and Servicing. Page 3 has space for an optional signature line so that the lender can document receipt of the disclosure.

The Loan Estimate includes two disclosures required under statutory provisions other than TILA and sections 4 and 5 of RESPA, which are currently typically provided as separate pages, as well as certain new disclosures under the Dodd-Frank Act. For example, the Loan Estimate includes an Appraisal disclosure currently required under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act and a Servicing disclosure currently required under section 6 of RESPA. The Loan Estimate incorporates the three pages of the current GFE, the two pages of the typical TILA disclosure, as well as the one-page Appraisal notice, and the one-page Servicing disclosure. Accordingly, the Loan Estimate incorporates at least seven pages of current disclosures into three pages of an integrated disclosure.

Closing Disclosure Details

To enable comparison with the Loan Estimate, the Closing Disclosure uses the same design principles, basic structure, and format as the Loan Estimate. The matching of these design elements was particularly important because the Closing Disclosure must provide significantly more information – often in significantly greater detail – than the Loan Estimate, such as an itemized summary of the borrower’s and seller’s transaction. One goal of the matching was to help consumers feel less overwhelmed as they encountered a longer, more detailed disclosure because they would recognize the opening page and the overall structure and format. In short, they could build on an existing cognitive map based on the Loan Estimate.

The basic structure of the Closing Disclosure is as follows:

- Page 1 of the Closing Disclosure essentially mirrors page 1 of the Loan Estimate for ease of comparison. Like page 1 of the Loan Estimate, it gives a basic summary of the Loan Terms and affordability information (Projected Payments and Costs to Close).
- Page 2 of the Closing Disclosure, like page 2 of the Loan Estimate, provides information about Closing Costs, but in significantly more detail because it records more detail regarding the loan and the real estate transaction.
- In contrast to the Loan Estimate, page 3 of the Closing Disclosure provides a Calculating Cash to Close table and detailed Summaries of Transactions for borrowers and sellers. The table is an expanded version of the Calculating Cash to Close table from the Loan Estimate. The table helps the borrower place the previous page of Costs at Closing into the larger context of the other elements that are included when determining the Cash to Close, such as the Down Payment. It also documents changes in the Cash to Close between the Loan Estimate and the Closing Disclosure and briefly explains why the change occurred or where the detail of the change is found on the disclosure. It also notes when a violation of the regulatory limitations on increases from the estimated charges has occurred. In combination with page 2, the Summaries of Transactions document the loan and real estate transaction fees for both the borrower and seller. They include items not present on the Loan Estimate, such as prorated property costs paid at closing or whether the seller’s loans are paid off.
- Pages 4 and 5 are similar to page 3 of the Loan Estimate. Like that page, they provide statements required by statute and additional useful information. The section titled Loan Disclosures on page 4 provides loan-specific disclosures for Assumption, Demand Feature, Late Payment, Negative Amortization, Partial Payment, Security Interest, and Escrow Account. It also includes the Adjustable Payment (AP) Table and the Adjustable Interest Rate (AIR) Table, if needed. The section titled Loan Calculations on page 5 provides a chart of loan-specific calculations, including Total of Payments, Finance Charge, Amount Financed, Annual Percentage Rate (APR), and Total Interest Percentage (TIP). The page also provides more general disclosures in a section titled Other Disclosures, including disclosures for Appraisal, Contract Details, Liability after Foreclosure, Loan Acceptance, Refinancing, and Tax Deductions. In addition, a chart contains Contact Information for the Lender, Mortgage Broker, two Real Estate Brokers, and a Settlement Agent. The page also includes a Questions box to refer consumers to the CFPB website and others in the Contact Information table. An optional signature line allows the lender to document receipt of the disclosure.

As with the Loan Estimate, the Closing Disclosure reduces the number of pages the consumer would receive during the settlement process. By our calculation, the five-page Closing Disclosure replaces the three-page HUD-1, the two-page Truth in Lending disclosure, and several additional separate and/or new disclosures, which potentially could have resulted in at least seven additional pages. These separate disclosures include the new disclosures required by the Dodd-Frank Act: (1) Total Interest Percentage, (2) Negative Amortization, (3) Partial Payment, (4) Escrow Account, and (5) Liability after Foreclosure.

1 Calculating Cash to Close

Close: Like the Loan

Estimate, this section lists the elements that make up the Cash to Close, including any deposit and credits. It lists the amounts from the Loan Estimate and the final costs to show changes and briefly explains why the change occurred or where more detail is located on the disclosure. It also notes when a violation of the regulatory limitations on increases from the estimated charges has occurred.

2 Summaries of Transactions

Transactions: A carryover from the HUD-1 revised to have more plain language, it summarizes the distribution of funds, including adjustments in amounts owed to the borrower or seller for prorated property costs, such as property taxes.

| Additional Information About This Loan | | |
|---|-------------------|---|
| Loan Disclosures 1 | | |
| Assumption If you sell or transfer this property to another person, your lender <input type="checkbox"/> will allow, under certain conditions, this person to assume this loan on the original terms. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> will not allow assumption of this loan on the original terms. | | |
| Demand Feature Your loan <input type="checkbox"/> has a demand feature, which permits your lender to require early repayment of the loan. You should review your note for details. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> does not have a demand feature. | | |
| Late Payment If your payment is more than 15 days late, your lender will charge a late fee of 5% of the monthly principal and interest payment . | | |
| Negative Amortization (Increase in Loan Amount) Under your loan terms, you <input type="checkbox"/> are scheduled to make monthly payments that do not pay all of the interest due that month. As a result, your loan amount will increase (negatively amortize), and your loan amount will likely become larger than your original loan amount. Increases in your loan amount lower the equity you have in this property. <input type="checkbox"/> may have monthly payments that do not pay all of the interest due that month. If you do, your loan amount will increase (negatively amortize), and, as a result, your loan amount may become larger than your original loan amount. Increases in your loan amount lower the equity you have in this property. <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> do not have a negative amortization feature. | | |
| Partial Payments Your lender <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> may accept payments that are less than the full amount due (partial payments) and apply them to your loan. <input type="checkbox"/> may hold them in a separate account until you pay the rest of the payment, and then apply the full payment to your loan. <input type="checkbox"/> does not accept any partial payments. If this loan is sold, your new lender may have a different policy. | | |
| Security Interest You are granting a security interest in 456 Somewhere Ave., Anytown, ST 12345 | | |
| You may lose this property if you do not make your payments or satisfy other obligations for this loan. | | |
| Escrow Account 2 | | |
| For now, your loan <input type="checkbox"/> will have an escrow account (also called an "impound" or "trust" account) to pay the property costs listed below. Without an escrow account, you would pay them directly, possibly in one or two large payments a year. Your lender may be liable for penalties and interest for failing to make a payment. | | |
| Escrow | | |
| Escrowed Property Costs over Year 1 | $2,473.56 | Estimated total amount over year 1 for your escrowed property costs: Homeowner's Insurance Property Taxes |
| Non-Escrowed Property Costs over Year 1 | $1,800.00 | Estimated total amount over year 1 for your non-escrowed property costs: Homeowner's Association Dues You may have other property costs. |
| Initial Escrow Payment | $412.25 | A cushion for the escrow account you pay at closing. See Section G on page 2. |
| Monthly Escrow Payment | $206.13 | The amount included in your total monthly payment. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> will not have an escrow account because <input type="checkbox"/> you declined it <input type="checkbox"/> your lender does not offer one. You must directly pay your property costs, such as taxes and homeowner's insurance. Contact your lender to ask if your loan can have an escrow account. | | |
| No Escrow | | |
| Estimated Property Costs over Year 1 | | Estimated total amount over year 1. You must pay these costs directly, possibly in one or two large payments a year. |
| Escrow Waiver Fee | | |
| In the future, Your property costs may change and, as a result, your escrow payment may change. You may be able to cancel your escrow account, but if you do, you must pay your property costs directly. If you fail to pay your property taxes, your state or local government may (1) impose fines and penalties or (2) place a tax lien on this property. If you fail to pay any of your property costs, your lender may (1) add the amounts to your loan balance, (2) add an escrow account to your loan, or (3) require you to pay for property insurance that the lender buys on your behalf, which likely would cost more and provide fewer benefits than what you could buy on your own. | | |

“Read Aloud” Instructions for Study Proctor

Introduction to Study (5 minutes)

Thank you for participating in our study. In the study, you will be asked to review certain documents and answer questions based on information presented in those documents. It may feel as if we are testing you, but we are interested in how well these documents work. Today, each of you will receive the same sets of questions. However, your documents may look different than those provided to other participants, and you may receive a different number of documents for each part. Also, the numbers in the documents may be different for each person in the room, so your answers may be different as well. Don’t worry if your documents or answers do not look like those of your neighbor. Please work carefully. We are interested in your thoughtful responses to the documents presented to you. The entire study takes about 60 minutes and I will give you an estimate of how long each task may take. You can stop participating at any time.

The study is divided into several parts:

- The materials for each part are in the LARGE GREEN envelope in front of you.
- Within the envelope are 5 colored envelopes, one for each part of our study today.
- As we begin each part, I will ask you to remove a particular colored envelope and to take out documents and/or a questionnaire. Remember that you may have a different number of documents than other people. Also, the questionnaire may refer to documents in the plural, but you may have only one. That is okay. Other people may have multiple documents.
- When you complete a part, please wait until I ask you to proceed. This will ensure that everyone is together at the start of each new part.
- I will also ask you to place your colored envelopes and completed materials back into the large GREEN envelope.
- I am happy to answer questions about the process and the testing procedures. However, I am not familiar with the content.

Are there any questions before we begin?

Part 1 (10 minutes)

Let's get started on Part 1. Here is the scenario for Part 1:

Assume that you have found a home you want to purchase and are now shopping for a mortgage loan. You have talked to loan officers at two different banks about taking out a mortgage. Each of the two banks gives you application disclosures when you apply that explain the costs and features of their loan product.

Please remove the PURPLE envelope from your large GREEN envelope. Make sure that it is marked Part 1. Now, please open the PURPLE envelope and pull out the two paper clipped sets of information. These are the application disclosures you would receive from two different banks. Do NOT remove the questionnaire—which is on YELLOW paper.

Look through these application disclosures carefully and think about which loan you would prefer. You may mark on the documents if you want.

It should take you about 5 minutes to complete this part. I will let you know when you are halfway through the five minutes and will give you a one minute warning.

When you are finished, please put down your pencil and the documents and look up so I know you are finished. Ready? Please start.

(Wait 2.5 minutes and say: "We are now halfway through the time.")

(Wait 4 minutes and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 5 minutes or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Now, please take out the questionnaire on YELLOW paper that is in the PURPLE envelope in front of you. Check to make sure that the questionnaire says "Part 1" on the top.

While you answer the questions, please look at the loan information you examined. Please work carefully. You have five minutes to complete this questionnaire. I will give you a one minute warning so you know how much time is left to complete this task.

When you are finished, put down the questionnaire and your pencil and look up so I know you are ready.

Ready to begin? Please start.

(Wait 4 minutes and say: "You have one more minute to complete this task.")

(Wait 5 minutes or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Thank you.

Please put the YELLOW questionnaire ONLY back into the PURPLE envelope and then put the PURPLE envelope back into the large GREEN envelope. Please keep the application disclosures in front of you.

Part 2 (8 minutes)

Now take out the YELLOW envelope. You can take the YELLOW questionnaire out of the YELLOW envelope. Check to make sure that the questionnaire says "Part 2" on the top.

You will need to look at the same two application disclosures we used in part one to answer these questions in Part 2. Please work carefully. It should take you approximately 10 minutes to complete this task.

I will give you both a 5 minute warning when you are halfway through the 10 minutes and also give you a one minute warning.

When you are finished, put down the questionnaire and your pencil and look up so I know you are ready.

Ready to begin? Please start.

(Wait 4 minutes and say: "We are now halfway through the time.")

(Wait 3 more minutes and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 8 minutes or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Thank you.

Please place the questionnaire you just completed AND all of the application disclosures you just reviewed into the YELLOW envelope and put the YELLOW envelope back into the large GREEN envelope.

Part 3 (12 minutes)

Now take out the BROWN envelope. Remove the questionnaire and the application disclosure(s). Remember that you may have different numbers of documents. Check to make sure that the questionnaire says "Part 3" on the top. Note that this loan information is identical to one of the application disclosure(s) you just looked at. It may not be the loan you selected in Part 1, but we want you to use this loan.

You will need to look at the loan information to answer these questions. Please work carefully. You will have about 15 minutes to complete this part.

I will let you know when you are halfway through the 15 minutes and will also give you a one minute warning.

When you are finished, put down the questionnaire and look up so I know you are ready. Are you ready? Please start.

(Wait 6 minutes and say: "We are now halfway through the time.")

(Wait 6 more minutes and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 1 MORE minute or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Please place the questionnaire back into the BROWN envelope and put the BROWN envelope back into the large GREEN envelope. Leave the application disclosure(s) you reviewed out in front of you for the next task.

Part 4 (10 minutes)

Now assume that you have decided to get your loan from the bank whose application disclosure(s) are in front of you. This bank has approved your loan and you are now ready to close or settle on the loan. The bank now gives you final loan disclosures that provide the final details about the costs and features associated with your loan.

Now take out the BLUE envelope. Do NOT remove the questionnaire which is on YELLOW paper. Please remove the clipped set of information. This set is the final disclosure(s) and has the final information you will need to close/settle on your loan.

Look through the information on the final disclosure(s) and compare it to the information on the application disclosure(s).

You will have about 5 minutes to look over these documents. I will let you know when you are halfway through the 5 minutes and will also give you a one minute warning.

When you are finished, put down the documents and your pencil and look up so I know you are ready. Are you ready? Please start.

(Wait 5 minutes and say: "We are now halfway through the time.")

(Wait 4 more minutes and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 5 minutes or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Now pull out the questionnaire that is on YELLOW paper in the BLUE envelope. Check to make sure that the questionnaire says "Part 4" on the top.

You will need to look at the application and final disclosure(s) to answer these questions. Please work carefully. This task should take you about 2 minutes to complete.

When you are finished, put down the questionnaire and your pencil and look up so I know you are ready. Ready? Please start.

(Wait 1 minute and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 1 more minute or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Thank you.

Keep all of the loan documents you just reviewed out with you.

Please put ONLY the YELLOW questionnaire back in the BLUE envelope. Now put the BLUE envelope into the GREEN envelope.

Part 5 (5 minutes)

Now take out the ORANGE envelope. Take out the YELLOW questionnaire in the ORANGE envelope. Check to make sure that the questionnaire says "Part 6" on the top.

Please look at the application and the final disclosures to answer these questions. Please work carefully. This task should take you about 5 minutes to complete.

I will let you know when you are halfway through the 5 minutes and will give you a one minute warning.

When you are finished, put down the questionnaire and your pencil and look up so I know you are ready. Ready? Please start.

(Wait 2.5 minutes and say: "We are now halfway through the time.")

(Wait 4 minutes and say: "You have one more minute to review the two documents.")

(Wait 5 minutes or until all participants have finished. If needed, give participants one additional minute, then say: "If you have not finished, that's fine. We are going to move on to the next section.")

Thank you.

Now, please place both the YELLOW questionnaire and all of the loan disclosures into the ORANGE envelope. Please put the ORANGE envelope into the GREEN envelope.

You have completed the entire set of tasks. Thank you for participating in the group. Please leave all materials in the GREEN envelope in front of you -- do not take any materials with you out of the room. You can pick up your check at the front desk.

A total of 16 different questionnaires were used for this survey based on the mortgage disclosure documents provided by the CFPB. Each of these questionnaires corresponds to a mortgage disclosure name set. The following questionnaire was used for the current disclosures and the Easier Fixed A and B (Maple Bank and Nandina Bank) loans. The questionnaires were identical except for the bank names and that the phrase "closing costs" instead of "settlement charges" was used for the proposed disclosures.

KnowledgePanel Background

KnowledgePanel members are recruited through national random samples, originally by telephone and now almost entirely by postal mail. Households are provided with access to the Internet and hardware, if needed. Unlike Internet convenience panels, also known as “opt-in” panels, that include only individuals with Internet access who volunteer themselves for research, KnowledgePanel recruitment uses dual sampling frames that include both listed and unlisted telephone numbers, telephone and non-telephone households, and cell-phone-only households, as well as households with and without Internet access. Only persons sampled through these probability-based techniques are eligible to participate on KnowledgePanel. Unless invited to do so as part of these national samples, no one can volunteer to be on the panel. To offset attrition, multiple recruitment samples are fielded evenly throughout the calendar year.

Building the KnowledgePanel: RDD Sampling Methodology

KnowledgePanel recruitment methodology has used the quality standards established by selected RDD surveys conducted for the Federal government, such as the CDC-sponsored National Immunization Survey. To build the KnowledgePanel, the recruitment employed list-assisted RDD sampling techniques based on a sample frame of the U.S. residential landline telephone universe. For purposes of efficiency, only those banks of telephone numbers (a bank consists of 100 numbers) that had fewer than two directory listings were excluded. Additionally, an oversampling was conducted within a stratum of telephone exchanges that had high concentrations of African American and Hispanic households based on Census data. Recruitment sampling is done without replacement, thus numbers already fielded do not get fielded again.

A telephone number for which a valid postal address can be matched occurred in about 67-70% of each sample. These address-matched cases were all mailed an advance letter informing them that they had been selected to participate in KnowledgePanel. For purposes of efficiency, the unmatched numbers were most recently under-sampled at a rate of 0.75 relative to the matched numbers. Both the minority over-sampling and this under-sampling of non-address households were adjusted appropriately in the panel's weighting procedures.

Following the mailings, telephone recruitment by trained interviewers/recruiters began for all sampled telephone numbers. Telephone numbers for cases sent to recruiters were dialed for up to 90 days, with at least 14 dial attempts for cases in which no one answered the phone, and for numbers known to be associated with households. Extensive refusal conversion was also performed. The recruitment interview, about 10 minutes in length, began with informing the household member that the household had been selected to join KnowledgePanel. If the household did not have a computer and access to the Internet, the household member was told that in return for completing a short survey weekly, the household would be provided with free monthly Internet access and a laptop computer (in the past, the household was provided with a WebTV device). All members of the household were enumerated, and some initial demographic and background information on prior computer and Internet use was collected.

Households that informed recruiters that they had a home computer and Internet access were asked to take surveys using their own equipment and Internet connection. Incentive points per survey, redeemable for cash, are given to these "PC" (personal computer) respondents for completing their surveys. Panel members provided with a laptop computer and free Internet access do not participate in this per-survey points-incentive program. However, all panel members receive special incentive points for select surveys to improve response rates and/or for all longer surveys as a modest compensation for the extra burden of their time and participation.

For those panel members receiving a laptop computer, each unit is custom-configured prior to shipment with individual email accounts so that it is ready for immediate use by the household. Most households are able to install the hardware without additional assistance, although a toll-free telephone line is available for technical support. The Call Center contacts household members who do not respond to e-mail and attempts to restore both contact and participation. PC panel members provide their own e-mail addresses and receive their weekly survey invitations at that e-mail account.

All new panel members receive an initial survey for the dual purpose of welcoming them as new panel members and introducing them to how online survey questionnaires work. New panel members also complete a separate profile survey that collects essential demographic information, such as gender, age, race, income, and education to create a personal member profile. This information can be used to determine eligibility for specific studies and is factored in for weighting purposes. Operationally, once the profile information is stored, it does not need to be re-collected as a part of each and every survey. This information is also updated annually for all panel members. Once new members have completed their profile surveys, they are designated as "active," and considered ready to be sampled for client studies. [Note: Parental or legal guardian consent is also collected for the purpose of conducting surveys with teenage panel members, aged 13 to 17.]

Once a household is recruited and each household member's e-mail address is either obtained or provided, panel members are sent survey invitations linked through a personalized e-mail message (instead of by phone or postal mail). This contact method permits surveys to be fielded quickly and economically, and also facilitates longitudinal research. In addition, this approach reduces the burden placed on respondents, since e-mail notification is less intrusive than telephone calls and allows research subjects to participate in research when it is convenient for them.

Transitioning to an Address-Based Sampling (ABS) Methodology

For the first KnowledgePanel recruitment in 1999, the conventional opinion among survey experts was that probability-based sampling could be carried out cost effectively through the use of a national RDD sample. The RDD landline frame at the time allowed access to 96% of U.S. households. This is no longer the case. In 2009, the use of the ABS sample frame for panel recruitment reflected the real changes in society and telephony over recent years. Those changes that have reduced the long-term scientific viability of landline RDD sampling methodology are as follows:

- Declining respondent cooperation in telephone surveys as reflected in "do not call" lists, call screening, caller-ID devices, and answering machines;
- The dilution of the RDD sample frame as measured by the working telephone number rate; and
- The emergence of cell-phone-only households (CPOHH) because such households are excluded from the RDD frame because they have no landline telephone.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (January-June 2010), approximately 28.6% of all U.S. households cannot be contacted through RDD sampling—26.6% as a result of CPOHH status and 2% because they have no telephone service whatsoever. Among some age segments, the RDD non-coverage would be substantial: 40% of young adults, ages 18–24, reside in CPOHHs, 51% of those ages 25–29 reside in CPOHHs, as do 40% of those ages 30–34.⁴⁶

After conducting an extensive pilot project in 2008, the decision was made to move toward an address-based sample (ABS) frame in response to the growing number of CPOHHs that are outside the RDD frame. Before conducting the ABS pilot, we also experimented with supplementing the RDD samples with cell-phone samples. However, this approach was not cost effective—and raised a number of other operational, data quality, and liability issues (for example, calling cell phones while respondents were driving).

Building the KnowledgePanel: Address-Based Sampling (ABS) Methodology

The key advantage of the ABS sample frame is that it allows sampling of almost all U.S. households. An estimated 97% of households are “covered” in sampling nomenclature. Regardless of household telephone status, those households can be reached and contacted through postal mail. Second, the ABS pilot project revealed several additional advantages beyond expected improvement in recruiting adults from CPOHHs:

- Improved sample representativeness for minority racial and ethnic groups
- Improved inclusion of lower educated and low income households
- Exclusive inclusion of the fraction of CPOHHs that have neither a landline telephone nor Internet access (approximately 4% to 6% of U.S. households).

ABS involves probability-based sampling of addresses from the U.S. Postal Service’s Delivery Sequence File. Randomly sampled addresses are invited to join KnowledgePanel through a series of mailings and, in some cases, telephone follow-up calls to non-responders when a telephone number can be matched to the sampled address. Operationally, invited households have the option to join the panel by one of several ways:

- Completing and returning a paper form in a postage-paid envelope,
- Calling a toll-free hotline, or
- Going to a dedicated website and completing an online recruitment form.

After initially accepting the invitation to join the panel, respondents are then “profiled” online by answering key demographic questions about themselves. This profile is maintained through the same procedures that were previously established for RDD-recruited panel members. Respondents not having an Internet connection are provided a laptop computer and free Internet service. Respondents sampled from the ABS frame, like those sampled from the RDD frame, are offered the same privacy terms and confidentiality protections that have been developed over the years and that have been reviewed by dozens of Institutional Review Boards.

Large-scale ABS sampling for KnowledgePanel recruitment began in April 2009. As a result, sample coverage on KnowledgePanel of CPOHHs, young adults, and non-whites has been increasing steadily since that time.

Because KnowledgePanel members have been recruited from two different sample frames, RDD and ABS, several technical processes have been implemented to merge samples sourced from these frames. The approach preserves the representative structure of the overall panel for the selection of individual client study samples. An advantage of mixing ABS frame panel members in any KnowledgePanel sample is a reduction in the variance of the weights. ABS-sourced samples tend to align more closely to the overall demographic distributions in the population, and thus the associated adjustment weights are somewhat more uniform and less varied. This variance reduction efficaciously attenuates the sample’s design effect and provides an advantage for study samples drawn from KnowledgePanel with its dual frame construction.
